ROBINSON JURY HEARS PELLETIER

The jury picked to hear the evidence in the case of Lawrence Robinson, charged with murder in shooting Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton in the Boylston Cafe on Friday, June 19, visited the scene of the shooting today, returned to the courthouse and next listened to the opening for the State by District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier.

The District Attorney began his opening at 11:42 o'clock. Among other things he said:

"The Commonwealth claims that the prisoner is guilty of murder in the first degree."

Robinson came into court today chewing gum, wearing a new Summer suit of gray, fashionable high turn-down collar, blue tie, white stockings and tanned leather shoes. He was cleanly shaven and his hair had been trimmed recently. He was one of the most composed, complacent, as well as best-dressed men in the courtroom. Had he not been sitting in the cage with three officers eyeing him all the time, he might have been taken for a lawyer or broker who had just dropped into the trial for a few moments from State street.

JURY CAUTIONED.

At the opening of proceedings in court District Attorney Pelletier addressed the jurors, explaining the necessity for visiting the scene of the shooting—how both he and Robinson's lawyers would point out the principal points. He warned the jurors not to talk to each other during the trip, as it was necessary that they see and hear everything the lawyers pointed out to them.

Robinson stood up and in response to a question said he would waive his right to accompany the jury on their trip. The indictment was also read to the jury, and Robinson smiled as his name was read, followed by six names which it is charged he has used in the past.

INDICTMENT READ.

The indictment is the shortest document of its nature in the history of Massachusetts prosecutions. It reads as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Suffolk ss. At the Superior Court, begun and holden at the City of Boston, within and for the County of Suffolk, for the transaction of criminal business, on the first Monday of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

The jurors for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on their oath present that Robinson, otherwise called George Roberts, otherwise called Albert Adams, otherwise called George Spencer, otherwise called Chippy Robinson, otherwise called Walter E. Spencer, otherwise called Albert Scott, otherwise called Harry Burton, on the nineteenth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen at Boston aforesaid, did assault and beat Thomas J. Norton with intent to murder him, and by such assault and beating did kill and murder the said Thomas J. Norton. A true bill.

J. C. PELLETIER,
District Attorney.
FRED J. KNEELAND,
Foreman of the Grand Jury.

The jury's trip to the scene of the shooting was made in a sightseeing auto. The body of juror, the escort of officers, the attending attorneys, prosecutors and others, attracted much attention in the neighborhood of the Boylston Cafe. A police detail from Lagrange street station was at the cafe doors while the jury was inside.

With the jurymen were two court officers, Sheriff Quinn, with tall hat and official white staff, District Attorney Pelletier, Assistant District Attorney Webber, Lieutenant John Rooney, attached to the District Attorney's office, and John H. and Hugh C. Blanchard, counsel for the defence.

The jurymen were taken down into the cafe by the Boylston street entrance nearest to Tremont street. They walked across to the section under the corner of Washington and Boylston streets, where Robinson and buddy were sitting before the shooting took place.

BULLET HOLE IN DOOR.

District Attorney Pelletier called attention to the position of the tables and chairs, to the mirror around the cafe walls, to the three steps leading to the exit by the cashier's desk and to a bullet hole in a door.

Then, walking across the cafe, the jurymen inspected the Washington

PLAYERS WIN FROM MAGNATES

By L. R. MURDOCK.

There will be no baseball strike.

The row which precipitated the trouble in the ranks of organized baseball was ended this afternoon with a complete victory for the Players' Fraternity.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, who counseled war against the Players' Fraternity, who threatened to close all of the major league parks if a strike were called, and who begged President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn Club nt to yield in the dispute Kraft case, was beaten. In fact, Johnson's published advice was ignored.

Consequently all major league baseball games will be played tomorrow as if nothing had happened. Clarence Kraft the player whose services were the cause of the dispute, gets all that he demanded.

EBBETTS SETTLES IT.

Ebbetts settled the controversy himself by acceding to what Kraft and President Fultz of the Baseball Players' Fraternity had insisted upon under the Cincinnati agreement.

The strike threatened by President Fultz unless the baseball magnates yielded was intended to include all of the teams in organized baseball the players of which belong to the fraternity.

There seemed to be a reluctance upon the part of many of the members of the fraternity to walk out because most of the conditions which formed their grievances of last Winter do not now exist.

Interviews with representatives of the fraternity in all of the major league clubs, however, showed that enough of the players would agree to make a farce of what games were played tomorrow and thereafter until the strike was settled. This showing is believed to have influenced Ebbetts and other cool heads among the magnates.

PLAYERS SATISFIED.

"Everything now has been satisfactorily arranged," said President Fultz this afternoon in New York. "The Players' Fraternity set out to protect Kraft and we have won our case."

Kraft, the player, whose case started the trouble, was drafted under Organized Baseball law from Nashville, Tenn., where he was playing in a minor league team. He was drafted by the Boston Braves and from them transferred to Brooklyn of the National League.

Kraft was ent back to the minors. He claimed that the manner in which the deal was put through violated an agreement which the Players' fraternity made with Organized Baseball last Winter, and the officers of the Fraternity sided with him.

The sending of Kraft to Nashville, Tenn., was what precipitated the row.

President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn Nationals this afternoon declared that Kraft had been purchased by the Newark team, which President Ebbetts controls, from the Nashville club. He stated that Kraft would receive all the money due him and would report to the Newark club at Providence, R. I., tomorrow.

The American League magnates went into session this morning and were still meeting when Ebbetts gave out these facts.

HOW IT STARTED.

The price which Ebbetts paid for Kraft was $2,500. The trouble which threatened to cause a strike of big

HALLIAN CHAUFFEUR TESTIFIES

Louis Ekman, chauffeur for Joseph Hallian of Hull, who eloped with Fern Hallian, his employer's daughter, and who is now on trial for abduction in the Hingham court before Judge Kelly, today told his story of his friendship with the girl on the witness stand.

He told how the girl came into the garage, put her arms around him and said: "I love you—do you love me?" He told how they went together to a hotel on Friday, May 15, when the girl told her mother she was going to be at a friend's house. He told how they used to sit on the kitchen table with our arms around each other.

The reporters were not admitted to the hearing today. They went to Judge Kelley and asked: "Why is this a private hearing?" He replied: "It is not private, but the room is small and the witnesses must not be crowded."

When court opened they entered the court room, but Chief Reynolds of the Hull police put them out, although Judge Kelley said he had no objection to their remaining.

SAYS GIRL VOWED LOVE.

This is Ekman's story. He was questioned by his attorney, Thomas H. Bellotte.

Q—How long have you been a chauffeur? A—Six years.

Q—How long have you worked for Mr. Hallian? A.—Thirteen months.

Q—How often did you see Fern Hallian? A—Three or four times a week, and we were out in the automobile.

Q—Did you have anything beyond ordinary conversation last Summer? A—No much of anything.

Q—When she came down to the garage did she put her arms around you, and did she say? A.—She said: "I love you. Do you love me?" We would stay in the garage for half an hour maybe, and then go for a drive. This happened three or four times a week.

Q—When did you go to Mr. Hallian's Arlington home? A.—Last Fall I saw her right along through the Winter. We would sit on the kitchen table with our arms around each other and talk.

TELLS OF TRIP.

Q—When was the first talk about eloping? A—In the car, about May 1.

Q—Did you and she once go on a trip. A.—Yes, we went away on May 15. Fern suggested it. She told her mother she was going up for tea. We passed as Mr. and Mrs Atkins. She made no mention.

Q—Did Fern ride with you this Summer? A—Yes. If there was anyone else in the car she would sit in the back seat, but when we were alone she would sit in the front seat with me.

Q—Did you take one drive into the woods? A.—Yes, along Forest avenue. Fern suggested it. When we got there we left the car.

Q—Did you plan to leave the Hallians? A.—Yes, three weeks before the elopement. I thought of leaving so she could forget me, because I had no money. Then we decided to elope.

TELLS OF ELOPEMENT.

Q—What did she do? A.—Before we eloped she packed her bag and left it on the stairs near my room so that I could get it. I took it with me to the moving picture theatre, where I met her.

Q—You say she frequently hugged you? A.—Yes.

Q—How long did you plan to elope? A.—Three months.

Q—Did you save money for three

Find Marked Shoes and Wigs in Girl's Trunk

Inspector Maurice Finn early today opened a trunk at the North Station which was believed to have belonged to Ada Taylor, the girl whose body was found on Winthrop beach last Thursday. He said afterward:

"Without a doubt the trunk belonged to the Taylor girl. There was clothing to it, and shoes marked with the maker's name. There was also jewelry and a number of false wigs. There were no maker's marks on the clothing.

"The trunk was taken from No. 87 Myrtle street on June 8. There is no clew to it, but there is no doubt the clothes belonged to her."

Save Crew in Wreck Off Nova Scotia

LOUISBURG, N. S., July 21.—The American schooner Harold C. Beecher of New York, was driven ashore near Tin Cove today and the crew was rescued with great difficulty. A hole was jammed in the schooner's hull and she immediately filled. Captain Terry said she would be a total loss. The Beecher was laden with iron mouldings for the Dominion Iron & Steel Company.

Guild Is Urged to Run for Congress

Curtis Guild is being boomed for Congress. The former Governor is urged to enter the field against the Democratic nominee in the eleventh district. Congressman Peters faces a hard fight for renomination and the Republicans believe with a man of national reputation they can win back the district that has been Democratic for twelve years.

MISSING SUITCASE HOLDS STRONG CLEW

A straw suitcase of regulation size has suddenly become the most important clew in the mysterious murder of Ada Taylor, the nurse whose body was found floating at Winthrop beach last Thursday.

The police say this suitcase, which held the effects of the victim, tends to eliminate the suicide theory and to point directly to murder. They regard it as the strongest link in their case, but they cannot learn what became of it.

That is the hardest task that confronts them just now—to locate the dead girl's suitcase and contents. They feel that the suitcase will put them on the trail of the slayer. They feel that it will help them to trace the movements of Ada Taylor and to fill the gap of nearly four days between her secret departure in the dead of night from the home of the Cedar family, where she had been employed three weeks, and the find- street side and then returned to the Boylston street side, leaving by the westerly exit.

FEW CURIOUS ATTEND TRIAL OF ROBINSON

On the Boylston street sidewalk the jurymen looked up and down the street, walked along Boylston street, then across to Bumstead court, where Robinson was captured. Returning, they noticed a door in an area by the Hotel Brewster. Then they returned to the courthouse.

Among the new arrivals in the mass of humanity were Detectives John Halloran and William J. Dunn, Coroner J. B. Hilliker and J. J. Thompson, jeweler, all of Grand Rapids, Mich. The Thompson jewelry store is the one where three men were shot and killed last Fall.

Crowds which gathered at the entrance to the courtroom for today's session of the Robinson trial were promptly cleared away by vigilant court officers.

GIVEN SHORT REST.

At 11:05 the jury arrived back at the courtroom. They were given a rest of ten minutes.

Robinson was brought from the detention room at 11:15. Moth C. Blanchard, his junior counsel, talked with him several minutes.

Attorney John H. Blanchard was asked by an AMERICAN reporter if Lawrence Robinson's mother would come to Boston to take the stand in defence of her son.

"No, I don't think so," he replied.

Former Assistant Federal District Attorney E. Mark Sullivan sat among the spectators in the courtroom.

As early as 10 o'clock the seats began to fill. At noon no crowd had appeared. The spectators numbered about sixty men.

At 11:20 Robinson moved over into the corner of the cage, in an easy attitude, his shoulders came forward, the right arm resting on the side of the grating, his fingers curving over the top rail in front of him. His trouser cuffs were pulled up above the ankle, revealing six inches or more of white hosiery. He wore a pale tan shirt with brown double stripes.

At 11:20 Rev. Dr. John L. Campbell of Cambridge, who is leading the fight for reform in that city, came in with a friend and took a seat on the front row of the rear settees.

At 11:45 Medical Examiners Magrath, Captain Armstrong and Lieutenant Rooney entered the courtroom.

Judge Keating came in at 11:50. Clerk Manning called the roll of jurors. Then he said:

"Lawrence Robinson?" "Here," said Robinson, rising.

TO UPHOLD LAW.

District Attorney Pelletier in his opening for the State said in part:

"The Commonwealth has no grudge to pay here. It has no malice or feeling in this case. The District Attorney is here to uphold the law. You shall have every scrap of evidence whether or not you deem it favorable to the prosecution or to the defence.

"The Commonwealth will claim that a man resisting arrest, taking in connecting with other things, is proof of malice. We will also claim the use of a revolver or pistol is proof of malice."

FIRST OBJECTION.

Attorney Blanchard objected, saying:

"By the District Attorney's statement and his analogies, this is not an opening as I understand it."

Judge Keating—He can proceed.

Blanchard—Will your honor save my exception?

The Court—Yes.

Mr. Pelletier (continuing)—I believe the court will instruct you that the use of a revolver is proof of malice. Now, first degree murder is the unlawful taking of life with deliberately premeditated malice aforethought. The court has said that a moment is enough for deliberate premeditation.

"The Commonwealth claims that the prisoner is guilty of murder in the first degree.

"Certain individuals went to police headquarters. As a result of the information they gave, Captain Armstrong called in Inspectors Norton, McCarthy and Claffin. He showed them a circular, issued by the Pinkerton detective agency, telling of a reward for the arrest of Robinson. You will hear Armstrong's own story of this.

"He told the inspectors: 'This is a bad man. If there is any shooting, you shoot first. He is up on the Common now. Now go along.'

GENERAL SCRAMBLE.

"The inspectors went to the Common, looked it over, did some telephoning and went to the Boylston Cafe. A Pinkerton detective met them at the door. He said to them: 'He is inside.'

"They entered the cafe. The Pinkerton man said: 'There he is over there.' A man named Duddy was sitting with him.

"Inspector Norton went up to the defendant and said: 'We are police inspectors from headquarters.' Robinson jumped up, overturned table and chairs and there was a scramble. Duddy ran away. Claffin engaged with him. Norton and McCarthy had Robinson by the coat. Norton said to the Pinkerton man: 'Get my stick.' The Pinkerton man said: 'Here's your gun,' and Norton said: 'No, not that pocket, get my stick.' Norton said to McCarthy: 'Give him the stick, Jack.'

"At this Robinson said: 'Don't hit me. I'll go with you.' Norton and McCarthy rushed their man to Robinson. Norton even took his right hand off to get his twisters. Robinson took advantage of this and in a moment the whole crowd was on the floor.

"The Pinkerton man said: 'Look out! He's getting his gun.'

"At this time Robinson was lying on the floor. Norton was over him. Robinson pulled the trigger and let Norton have it. The bullet entered Norton's breast. Norton died that same evening.

months for that purpose? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you think you were so attractive, so good-looking that they would welcome you as a son-in-law? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you once plan to elope to Connecticut? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you go in Portland? A.—To the movies and all over the city.

Q.—How did Mrs. Hallian treat you? A.—Always nicely.

Attorney Michael J. Sughrue then cross-examined Elsman. Attorney Sughrue is acting for Mr. Hallian.

Q.—How old are you? A.—Twenty-three.

Q.—You've told us what she did with other people in Europe and in the South. Have you thought of everything to degrade her? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever do any gaming? A.—Yes.

Q.—How much did you ever win? A.—Twelve dollars.

Q.—Did you tell other chauffeurs of what you were able to do with Fern Hallian? A.—No, sir. I don't remember.

He then told, under questioning of episodes in the kitchen of the Hallian home in Arlington, beginning last April.

Q.—Did she want to communicate with her parents after you signed? A.—No.

Q.—Not at all? A.—No.

Q.—What names did you give in Portland? A.—None.

Q.—How did you find a house where no questions were asked you? A.—The cab driver took us there.

Q.—Did you exchange a pin for one of her rings? A.—Yes.

Recess was then taken.

MRS. CARMAN FOUND ON FARM IN ANGRY MOOD

RAVEN ROCK, N. J., July 18.—Dr. Edwin Carman, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Florence Carman, who is accused of having shot Mrs. Louise Bailey to death in the office of her husband in Freeport, L. I., and their nine-year-old daughter Elizabeth on arriving here went directly to Dr. Carman's farm in Hunterdon County, three miles from the Pennsylvania railroad station.

Every effort was made to keep secret the destination of the Carman party.

A reporter located the farm today. The house is a picturesque old structure, but sounds of merriment, as it is known in the gayest part of New York city, came from it as the reporter drove from the main road.

PLAYING RAGTIME.

A quarter of a mile down the road came sounds of a piano, badly out of tune and played without regard to anything save a sort of ragtime.

Above the old piano resounded the shrieks of laughter and songs. As the reporter drew nearer, one song was made out.

"You made me what I am today, I hope you're satisfied," shouted the singers.

Elizabeth Carman heard the reporter's knock. She was smiling as she said in answer to the question if her father or mother were at home:

"Nope, father and mother have gone automobiling. Don't know when they will be back. Don't know what they have gone."

Later Dr. and Mrs. Carman returned. Mrs. Carman was laughing when she stepped from the car, but the smile froze on her lips as she caught sight of the reporter. Her face became almost white with rage and from laughter her tones turned to rancor as she said:

MRS. CARMAN INDIGNANT.

"I had hoped I had got rid of the newspapers with the rest of my enemies, for a time at least; but it seems even a rest is to be denied to me. What right have you to follow me? The newspapers are largely responsible for my present trouble, with their silly stories of my jealousy. But I keep on denying that I was jealous but merely curious."

"All you people are thinking of is your stories, the same as other people who were willing to sacrifice anyone for their own ends.

"But I have said all I am going to. My time will come later. I am innocent, but what's the use of saying that over? The newspapers are not my friends. It is none of your business what my plans are. I probably would be unable to carry them out anyway. I did hope to be able to come up here, away from the world, and rest, but even that is denied.

"I am watched and hounded constantly. Now if I had been proved guilty I could not be more humiliated or treated worse than I am now. The treatment I have received has been frightful.

"I have said what I thought of certain persons and that is sufficient. I am tired of it all. One woman against dozens of men.

"I want to be left alone. Instead of wasting your time looking me up, you could better employ it by looking up some of the witnesses who were so eager to testify against me. Find out who they are and their object in giving testimony against me. You may find a better story in that than you are apt to find here."

Mellen Here; 'State Liberties in Peril'

Charles S. Mellen was in Boston today. He refuses himself to interviewers. When asked what business brought him here, he replied: "Didn't I say I would not be interviewed?"

Assured that the public really had some interest in the matter, Mr. Mellen responded: "Well, tell the dear Boston public I am here to steal away the liberties of the people of Massachusetts!"

LEADERS MEET KING IN HOME RULE COUNCIL

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, July 21.—Buckingham Palace became the scene of one of the most important political conferences of the present era today when members of the various factions met there to frame ways and means for the settlement of the Irish question.

"Civil war must be averted at any cost," is the attitude of King George, who was responsible for the conference. "No compromise" is the stand taken by Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists.

The delegates were welcomed at the palace by King George in person, but it was a significant circumstance that the King did not take part in the conference. He had intended to be one of the conferees, but was advised that already there was much dissatisfaction among all parties over what appears to be "unconstitutional interference" on the part of the monarch.

It was generally regarded as doubtful whether the Buckingham Palace conference would lead to any definite action. The Irish Nationalists were suspicious of it because it had first been suggested to King George by Lord Lansdowne and Lord Lansdowne, both of whom are openly opposed to home rule.

Great crowds gathered in the streets when the members of the conference arrived and all of them were cheered as they entered the palace. Scotland Yard took unusual police precautions to prevent a suffragette demonstration, and detectives acted as bodyguard for Premier Asquith and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who represented the government. After the conference had been in session for about a half-hour, both Premier Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George withdrew in order to leave the Unionists, the Ulster Covenanters and the Irish Nationalist representatives to talk among themselves over a possible solution of the Ulster exclusion question.

Shortly afterwards John E. Redmond and John Dillon, the representatives of the Nationalists, followed Soon Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster anti-home rule forces, and the others withdrew Speaker James Lowther of the House of Commons, who presided, announced that there would be another session of the conference tomorrow.

Mystery in Sudden Extinguishing of Nantasket Lights

The Nantasket Beach "Raffles" may be found responsible for the mysterious "Plague of Darkness" which visited the beach last night.

At half past nine every electric light mysteriously winked out. Movies had to shut down. Hotels were helpless. Tangoing stopped. And in the restaurants diners couldn't see to eat.

But after a few minutes everyone trooped out on the beach and in the clear light of stars—the moon hadn't risen yet—trooped and raced and giggled and sparked all up and down the smooth sand.

The Hull electric light station said they couldn't explain the phenomenon. They had had no trouble with the apparatus. And the affair remained a mystery.

16-Year-Old Shah Takes Oath of Office

TEHERAN, Persia, July 21.—Sultan Ahmed Mirza, the sixteen-year-old Shah of Persia, today, on attaining his official majority, took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the National Council. The ceremony was very brief and took place in the presence of the members of the National Council, the royal princes, high State officials, foreign diplomatic representatives and their wives.

County Dublin Men Aid Volunteers

The County Dublin Association has voted $25 to aid the Irish Volunteer movement in Ireland. A subscription list was opened among the members and netted $27, making a total of $52 to be turned over to Mr. T. B. Fitzpatrick, national treasurer for the United Irish Leagues. The association voted to hold their Annual outing at Peddock's Island on September 6.

Freedom of Athens Offered Williams

ATHENS, Greece, July 21.—Prominent public men are planning to honor George Fred Williams of Boston, who resigned as American minister to Greece and Montenegro, after his activities in Albanian affairs, by giving him the freedom of the city of Athens. Mr. Williams has become very popular here.

3 SHOT; FOUR HELD IN WHITE SLAVE BATTLE

A woman and two men are at the Relief Hospital seriously wounded, and four men were arraigned in court today, as a result of a running gun battle through streets in the West End after a dance in Schwartz Hall, in Leverett street. Eight men are said to have taken part in the shooting affray and the police are searching for the others.

Those injured were Mrs. Sarah Brickman, twenty-nine, of No. 25 Lynde street, shot in the abdomen; Frank Esposito, twenty-five, of No. 3 Lindell place, shot in the abdomen, and Michael Spino, twenty-five, of No. 43 Joy street, who has a bullet wound in the head. Mrs. Brickman and Esposito may die.

The battle is said to have been the outgrowth of a quarrel between two rival gangs of white slavers over a girl which the members of one gang had "stolen" from the other. Thirty shots were fired as the battle raged through Leverett, Lynde, Green, Staniford and Cambridge streets. The shooting created a panic in the neighborhood.

East Boston and Chelsea Hail Order for 80-Cent Gas

East Boston and Chelsea people are jubilant today over the order of the Gas and Electric Light Commission that the price of gas in those sections be reduced to 80 cents. The new price will go into effect August 1. Since 1911 the price in this territory has been 85 cents.

Governor Walsh vetoed a bill making 80 cents the price for East Boston on the ground the commission was investigating and that Chelsea was not included.

Hunt Reckless Canton Autoist

The Canton police are today searching for the driver of an automobile who struck a carriage driven by Charles O. Marshall, superintendent of John Saltonstall's farm, and threw Marshall and his wife into the road. The automobile did not stop. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall escaped with a few bruises. The police say the autoists were reckless.

Girl Tries Vainly to Save Drowning Man

Expect Rate Raise Decision Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, July 21.—While there was nothing official at the Interstate Commerce Commission offices today to indicate when the decision in the 5 per cent. rate increase case will be forthcoming, it was the general impression that the ruling would be made public tomorrow, or the next day. This belief was based on the fact that Secretary George B. McGinty of the committee, who has been away for several days, is expected to return to his desk tomorrow. The secretary has direct charge of the giving out of all important decisions of the commission

MADAME CAILLAUX CONDUCTS OWN CASE WITH DRAMATIC SKILL

PARIS, July 21.—Directing her own fight for her life in a manner which surprised the spectators, Mme. Henriette Caillaux, who is on trial for the murder of Gaston Calmette, the brilliant editor of Le Figaro, showed calmness today which was in contrast with her emotional outbreaks yesterday.

When the second day's session of this famous trial began at noon in the Palace of Justice before Judge Louis Albanel and four associate Justices, a crowd fully as large as that of yesterday surged about the building in hopeless efforts to enter.

Gathering her skirt about her, the beautiful prisoner walked slowly to the enclosure reserved for defendants accompanied by a gendarme. She seated herself and looked about the room. The work of taking testimony began at once. Mme. Caillaux followed each witness intently, leaning forward in her chair with parted lips as some of the testimony seemed unusually damaging to her case. Frequently she rose quickly to her feet, calling out:

DISPUTES WITNESSES.

"No, no, you must not say that," or "that statement is untrue."

Although friends and relatives of the defendant made their sympathy known in every possible way, the friends of the slain editor who were present lost no opportunity to disconcert Mme. Caillaux. They laughed loudly at some of her statements.

Mme. Caillaux showed the alertness of her mind by the quickness with which she grasped legal points and the readiness of her answers to all questions put to her.

Joseph Caillaux, husband of the prisoner and former Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, had sent his wife a eloquent bouquet of red roses during the morning, court not opening until noon. Mme. Caillaux wore one of these roses in her corsage when she entered the chamber, but during a tense moment she plucked the rose from her breast and tore the petals apart, one by one.

Public interest in the case had been heightened by news sent out by the defendant in the story of her life. The narrative of her relations with M. Caillaux while the latter was married to another woman was old to those Paris, but it had served to increase the number of those who wished to see what Mme. Caillaux looks like.

M. NICET A WITNESS.

The first witness of the day was M. Nicet, who has charge of the reception room in the offices of Le Figaro. He was followed by M. Nivet, who had conducted Mme. Caillaux into the office of Calmette on the evening of March 16 last when the tragedy occurred.

"Did you know the identity of this woman?" asked the court.

"I did not," replied the witness. "Her card was enclosed in a sealed envelope."

"When did you learn her identity?"

"Not until after the crime."

"Oh, you must have known, who I was," cried Mme. Caillaux, leaping to her feet.

The witness shook his head in the negative.

There was considerable excitement during the recital of Sirac. "She is French; tell me its name," began the witness.

"You didn't ask me," declared the Caillaux stood in the middle of the room holding a revolver in her hand, presented in a shrill voice, bouncing to her feet.

HEARD SHOT IN OFFICE.

"M. Calmette seemed much surprised," continued the witness, "when he opened the sealed envelope and read the name on the card. He told me to admit the visitor immediately."

The witness said that within less than five minutes afterward he heard a shot in Calmette's office, followed by several others.

"I ran into the room," said Sirac. The apartment was full of smoke. M. Calmette was sprawled upon the floor beside his desk, where he had fallen, and a thin stream of blood was pouring from his head. Mme. When I saw the weapon I drew back, but the madame, who was perfectly calm, remarked in a quiet voice, 'Don't be afraid. I am Mme. Caillaux. I've only done justice.'"

The defendant grew perceptibly excited while Sirac was describing the events of the night of March 16, and shifted about in her chair when she was not interrupting.

The next witness was Paul Bourget famous French playwright, member of the French Academy, and a close personal friend of Calmette. It was he who had been talking to Calmette when Mme. Caillaux entered the office of Le Figaro and withdrew upon her entrance into Calmette's office. He said that he had often discussed with M. Calmette the Caillaux letters.

"M. Calmette never intended to do any harm to Mme. Caillaux," declared Bourget. "He would never have published any private letters reflecting upon the honor of this defendant. The letters which he published were used in the interest of a campaign against Caillaux which Calmette was waging in his paper."

Angry accusations of favoritism were made against Judge Albanel by friends and relatives of Calmette. An instance was the polite manner in which the judge questioned the prisoner. A favorite mode of address on the part of the judge was, "Will you permit me, Madame, to ask you one little question?"

That was in sharp contradistinction with the usual hectoring of prisoners by French judges.

While Bourget was on the stand Maitre Labori, chief of counsel for Mme. Caillaux, read extracts from his plays and novels in defence of the unwritten law.

"You are condemning the unwritten law now," said the lawyer. "How do you explain that?"

Bourget then proceeded to make a long, dramatic speech in which he pointed out the inadvisability of putting principles drawn from the novels into practice in every-day life.

"ONLY WAY TO END AFFAIR."

Bourget was in the hallway when the shots were fired. He ran into the room, and as he passed through the door he heard Mme. Caillaux mutter:

"There is no justice in France. All these monstrosities will now come to life."

A writer on Le Figaro named Gireaudau, who was in a room adjoining M. Calmette's office, heard a woman's voice exclaim:

"This is the only way to finish the affair." Immediately after the shots were fired, M. Gireaudau swore.

An advertising clerk named Voisel testified that he was in the reception room when Mme. Caillaux was present, but that he did not hear the name "Caillaux" mentioned. This occasioned another interruption. Mme. Caillaux leaped to her feet. There was anger in her face as she cried:

"Ah, Monsieur, you did hear the name Caillaux mentioned. While I was present I heard some one ask you whether the advertising for the next day's issue of the paper had been arranged. You replied: 'There is not much space left because a long story about Caillaux is to be printed tomorrow.'"

"Madame is mistaken; I said nothing of the kind," replied the witness with some heat.

The controversy seemed on the verge of a bitter quarrel when M. Labori interposed.

"Perhaps such a conversation did not occur," suggested the lawyer softly. "Mme. Caillaux might have been in such an excited frame of mind that she thought she heard it."

The lawyer's remarks created a sensation, some of the spectators actually shouting in their excitement.

M. Poncetoon, a sub-editor of Le Figaro, next took the stand.

"While the shots were being fired I ran into Calmette's office," said the witness. "The wounded man had not yet fallen. With his dying strength he picked up several valuable documents from his desk and handed them to me. Later I gave them to the cashier."

Latest and best photograph of Mme. Caillaux. She held a packed courtroom spellbound for hours with her thrilling recital of why she killed Gaston Calmette.

Fishing Fatalities Smallest in Years

The Year Book of the Boston Fish Men's Association, issued today, shows that thirteen New England fishing vessels were lost in 1913, the largest number since 1894, but that only twenty-six lives were lost, the smallest number in the history of modern fisheries. Practically all of the wrecks were off the Nova Scotia coast. Eleven of the thirteen lost vessels went ashore. One was cut down by a liner. The other was burned.

Say Calhoun Took More Than a Million

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—Between 1911 and 1913 more than $1,000,000 was withdrawn from the treasury of the United Railroads by Patrick Calhoun, ex-president of the company, and, in the belief of Thornwall Mullally, assistant to Calhoun and a director of the company, was charged to Calhoun's personal account. This developed from the testimony of Mr. Mullally before the State Railroad Commission.

'HOUNDED,' SAYS MRS. ANGLE, OUT ON BAIL AGAIN

STAMFORD, Ct., July 21.—"I am being hounded by the friends of Waldo R. Ballou. If it were not for these persons I would be a free woman long ago," bitterly declared Mrs. Helen M. Angle today, following her release upon bail for the second time since she was taken into custody as a material witness to the death of the Ballou manufacturer.

"I am being persecuted," she continued. "I still say that my mind is a blank as to what took place that fatal night. I would like to explain my actions, but I cannot. I cannot account for my wiping the blood from the sidewalk, or why men persecuted like this, for I have done nothing! Why don't they turn me loose?"

Mr. Angles was at the home of her sister, Mrs. Geo. Eagler, No. 427 Main street. She was propped up in bed by pillows and her father sat beside her holding her hand and cheering her up with a word here and there. Her attorney, Leonard Blondel, rose today to have his daughter admitted to two of the local sanitariums, but was refused.

HUERTA SAYS U. S. PLANS TO ANNEX MEXICO

PUERTO, Mexico, July 21.—With General Victoriano Huerta safe on board the German cruiser Dresden steaming for Jamaica, officials breathed easier today. It had been feared since the arrival of the former dictator and General Aurelliano Blanquet, former minister of war, that an attack by rebels in this vicinity would lead to bloody fighting and perhaps a massacre if the rebels should be successful. This fear was removed with the departure of the ex-dictator.

Those of the Federal soldiers of Huerta's body guard, who were not sent back to Mexico City threw away their uniforms and disappeared in the forest. The other members of the Huerta party are on board the British cruiser Bristol, but it was said that they would sail immediately for Jamaica upon a passenger steamship which was expected this afternoon or tomorrow.

Before his departure Huerta gave out a remarkable interview in which he declared his belief that the U. S. is preparing to annex Mexico. He said:

"President Wilson has attempted more than he can carry out. His Mexican policy will never succeed. He thinks he knows the Mexican people but he does not. I understand them because I am one of them—not one of the aristocrats, but one of the plain people. I am just an Indian, but I know what I am talking about."

"I believe that the United States will intervene in Mexico. This will be made apparent before six months have elapsed. President Wilson will have to acknowledge it."

Then Huerta dropped into a joking mood.

"Senor Wilson is my friend," he said. "Carranza is my friend. Villa is my friend. They are all my friends. Have they not made me famous? Senor Wilson has attacked me often, but I have ignored him."

Upon being asked as to his plans Huerta said he would sail from Kingston to France and go immediately to the Riviera to join Porfirio Diaz, former President of Mexico, who is in exile. Huerta is undecided whether to make his future home in Paris or Spain, but being a man who likes exactly he will undoubtedly choose Paris.

A Washday Visitor Hears About Fels-Naptha Soap

Belle—"Well, Mary! Did you do that big wash I see out on the line and have time to sit down and rest at 3 o'clock in the afternoon?"

Mary—"I just guess I did. I've been resting since 2 o'clock, too."

Anty Drudge—"I told Mary about Fels-Naptha Soap some time ago, and since she's been using it she has more time for rest, and she doesn't need to keep up a hot fire, because with Fels-Naptha Soap you can use cool water and do better work."

Would you like to feel that you can let the fire go out and not worry about having hot water to wash the dishes with? If you use Fels-Naptha Soap, you can, because it works best in cool or lukewarm water.

No stains need worry you, for Fels-Naptha Soap will take them out. It will save you weary hours of standing on tired feet bending over the washtubs.

Grease on pots and pans dissolves—marks disappear from woodwork—glass and silverware shine, if you use Fels-Naptha Soap.

Follow the directions on the Red and Green Wrapper.

Better buy Fels-Naptha by the carton or box.

SEEK SLAIN GIRL'S MISSING SUIT CASE AS THE KEY TO BEACH MYSTERY

HUNT CONCORD MAN IN WINTHROP CASE

ing of her body at dawn Thursday by Crossing Tender Gillespie at Ocean Street.

The police say if Ada Taylor had contemplated suicide because of reverses or ill health she would have dressed herself in the best clothes at time she went out that Sunday evening without hat or coat, and not return, steal into the Cedar apartments, pack her grip and disappear through the rear door after all members of the household were asleep.

CASE WOULD FLOAT.

A suicide, they say, would never have encumbered herself with extra luggage. The first time she went out she was more better arranged for suicide than when she went lugging a suit case with the few belongings which she carried with her to the beach when she got the position.

If she jumped into the sea with the suit case it would have floated. It would have been washed ashore. It contained nothing that would cause it to sink. If she weighted it it would be near shore and would have been stepped on long ago by bathers.

But the suitcase hasn't been found. If it is it will open up a new avenue of speculations. Who and what caused Ada Taylor to leave the employ of the Cedes so mysteriously without notice? Who was the MAN in her life, which friends in the West End tell of? Did she meet this man by accident or appointment when she took her after-supper stroll that Sunday evening?

Who didn't she take her afternoon off that Sunday as had been her custom during the three weeks she was in the Ceder family employ? What caused her to cancel her half-holiday? Did she purposely try to avoid some male friend, and, in her easily exciting stroll for the beach, run into him?

Did he induce her to go with him? If so, where? Where did the suitcase go to? Where is it hidden today? Where did Ada Taylor spend the days between Sunday night and Wednesday night, when four or five reputable witnesses at No. 249 Shirley drive heard a woman in distress on the beach that was hidden by dense fog, heard an hysterical cry, followed by groans and gurgling sounds, consistent with strangling?

THEORY OF POLICE.

Superintendent West and Inspector Flinn of the Metropolitan Park police attach much importance to the testimony of these witnesses. They feel that the girl met her death on the beach late last Wednesday night, and that the absence of the suitcase indicates that she was living somewhere in Winthrop, perhaps in secret, from Sunday night until she died.

Today they are trying to trace her movements, and what they want far more than to know the whereabouts today in the baggage room at the North Station is that straw suitcase.

Search for the suitcase in which she carried away her effects, the possibility of a secret marriage, the motive, for her strange departure from the house of her employer and the identity and whereabouts of the Concord man with whom she is reported to have been friendly, today occupied the attention of the police.

The establishing of the identity of the victim instead of aiding the police has deepened the mystery. Each clew followed by the detectives has opened up a new and more baffling angle to the case, and they are no nearer a solution of the crime than the morning the body was discovered in the water.

BELIEVE SHE WAS A BRIDE.

New developments in the case has given rise to the belief Miss Taylor was secretly married and that the marriage was an unfortunate one. The fact that she was married was partially borne out by the statement of Medical Examiner Leary after he had performed an autopsy upon her body. As a result the police are searching for the records of her marriage. Miss Taylor's brother Leonard, who identified the body, and her sister, Miss Ethel Divol of Lexington, declared today that as far as the members of her family knew Miss Taylor never married. Leonard Taylor, however, had not seen his sister for seven years, and Mrs. Divol says she has not seen her for three years.

SEEK MAN IN CASE.

The secret marriage theory also offers a plausible explanation for Miss Taylor's flight from the Ceder home, where she had been employed three weeks previous to the suicide. It is thought the woman may have been pursued by some person whom she either dreaded or fell in contempt, and that he had traced her to Winthrop. This man, the police say, may have been her husband or some other man with whom she had at one time been friendly.

The finding of the victim's trunk at the North Station also leads the police to believe she had been contemplating flight from Winthrop. To escape some person whom she feared or despised. It is thought she may have been on her way out of the city when she obtained the position in the home and got the trunk from it, thinking she might enjoy the atmosphere at the beach for the rest of the Summer and at the same time throw off pursuit. The contents of the trunk offered no clew which would aid in solving the mystery.

IN NEED OF MONEY.

The theory that Miss Taylor was slain for her money was given a serious setback today when Mrs. Frank Ceder declared Miss Taylor acted as though she was badly in need of funds. Hitherto Miss Taylor was reputed to have had a considerable sum of money—the savings of a life time—and part of which she constantly carried about with her. This money, if she had it, is thought to have been in the suit case. Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Garvy of Myrtle street, in whose house the Taylor girl lived for nine months said that a man in Concord, Mass., who seemed to have a claim on her frequently called on her and demanded money.

At times this man was intoxicated and offensive and more than once Ada Taylor reprimanded him and sent him away.

VICTIM OF MISFORTUNE.

Ada Taylor told Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Garvy that she met this Concord man while she was employed at a Concord hotel, but an investigation today among the hotels of that town failed to reveal any such woman as ever having worked there.

The dead woman seems to have been a daughter of misfortune—a figure abjectly pathetic—a little woman, well meaning, but frail and industrious.

Fate had been harsh with her. Her recent years had been crowded with adverses and misfortunes, but she kept her troubles from even her most intimate friends.

She was secretive to an exceptional degree. She still had the habit of burdening others with her cares. She was a drifted away from the family homestead in Amherst, N. S., and had been swallowed up in the world. That is why even her brother and sisters are today as much in the dark as strangers concerning certain chapters in her life.

The police are confident that if they can find Miss Taylor's suit case they will be able to account for the young woman's movements between the time of her departure from the Ceder residence in Shirley street, Winthrop, on July 12, and Wednesday evening, July 16, when, it is thought, she came to her death on Winthrop beach not far from Locust street, in the shadow of the stone wall skirting shore Drive.

This interval of nearly four days constitutes one of the most puzzling features of the case.

The police are inclined to believe that Miss Taylor, in taking her stroll after supper that Sunday evening, met some male friend by appointment or accident; that she spent several hours in his company, and that he induced her to leave the employ of the Ceder family with him.

This theory is born out in a measure by the strange conduct of Miss Taylor on that night. It was her custom during the three weeks in which she worked for the Ceders to take a half holiday off Sunday and to return about 9 or 9:30 in the evening.

On the last Sunday she declined to take her regular afternoon off, possibly because of some private plan, and went for a stroll down the beach without her hat or coat. Although she did not say anything, the members of the Ceder family thought that she would return shortly.

Mrs. Ceder retired at 9:30 and left the front door open, so that Miss Taylor could get in. Next morning Mrs. Ceder was surprised not to find Miss Taylor in the house. She found that the girl had not occupied the sofa in the kitchen where she was accustomed to sleep.

Investigation showed that the nurse had returned some time between 9:30 and 11, had packed her straw dress suitcase, had locked the front door and had left the house by the rear door, which was found open Monday morning.

What the police would like to find out now is, why Miss Taylor, who was so proper and regular in her habits, should have taken this clandestine way of leaving her employers.

They would like to know what happened during her stroll which made her so suddenly resolve to go home and leave her position in such an abrupt and peculiar way without a word of notice. They would like to know why the girl was so secretive in entering and leaving the house.

She had been friendly with the Ceder family and had never complained about her duties.

Mrs. Ceder and others who came in contact with Miss Taylor got the impression that she was married. They felt that she was separated from her husband and that possibly he troubled her from time to time and possibly made demands for money.

Mrs. Ceder said that when she came to work for them, Miss Taylor remarked that she was hard pressed for money and was glad to work for anything to get the beach air.

This statement by Miss Taylor to Mrs. Ceder contradicts the statement made by Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Garvy, who were given to understand by Miss Taylor that she had saved up much of her earnings.

They thought that she had quite a little money when she left Boston, and the police are inclined to believe the same but that it was almost all gone when she left her possession.

Perhaps the man who thought he had a claim on her took account for where this money went. Perhaps this is the man whom she met on that night at Winthrop Beach.

Perhaps this is the man who murdered her. These are all points which the Metropolitan, Winthrop and Boston police are determined to fathom.

NOT REPORTED MISSING.

The report of Medical Examiner Leary on the death of the nurse, to be made public in "two or three days," is expected to contain the words, "Ada Taylor was murdered."

When Miss Taylor notified Mrs. Adelaide E. F. Lord of No. 62 Pinckney street that she was going to leave her employ, one thought was in the dead girl's mind. She intended to go to Concord to work in a restaurant, where she said she had worked for several Summers previously.

Money or love or both brought the girl to her death, the police declare, secret lettering and leaving the house.

Money or love or both brought the girl to her death, the police declare, secret lettering and leaving the house.

It is believed that something drew the girl out of the Ceder home. It is not believed that she packed her belongings and simply left because of dissatisfaction or a desire to go elsewhere to better her condition.

The Ceders are expected to be asked why they did not report the disappearance of their nurse.

Ceder visited the beach at Ocean Spray, he said to the AMERICAN, after the body was removed. He also said that he had about determined to notify the police of her absence on Sunday. The next day she was found, dead, a victim of foul play.

As to whether the girl drank, Ceder could only say: "I kept whiskey in the house but I don't know that she ever touched it."

FOLLOW HOTEL CLEW.

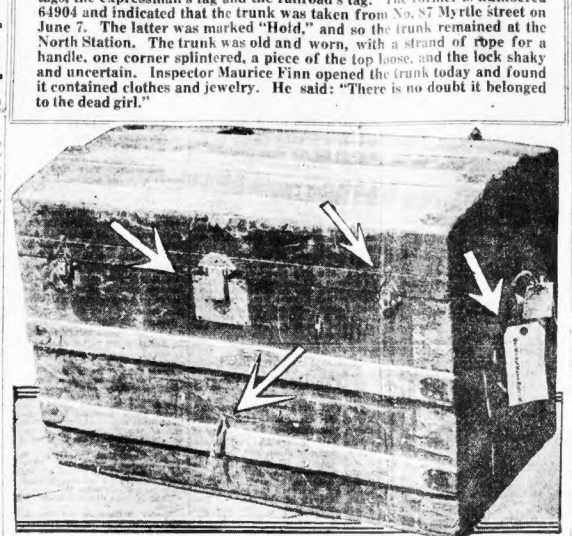
It is pointed out by the police that there was ample opportunity for a visitor to call on the girl in the Ceder home, since both Mr. and Mrs. Ceder were away all day and late in the evening, conducting their fruit store at No. 490 Shirley street.

Mrs. Ceder was alone in the store a great part of the day while her husband was out with his team securing fruit from the Boston market and delivering it about the town. Lippitt, the lodger, after being served with breakfast by the Taylor girl was absent all day in Boston. He is a salesman.

Every parcel room is being searched by the detectives for the missing suitcase of the dead girl. So far nothing has been found. Today the hotel checking rooms will be investigated.



The battered trunk, the property of Ada Taylor, whose body was found on Winthrop Beach. The arrows indicate identifying marks. Note the two tags, the expressman's tag and the railroad's tag. The former is numbered 64904 and indicated that the trunk was taken from No. 87 Myrtle street on June 7. The latter was marked "Hold," and so the trunk remained at the North Station. The trunk was old and worn, with a strand of rope for a handle, one corner splintered, a piece of the top loose, and the lock shaky and uncertain. Inspector Maurice Finn opened the trunk today and found it contained clothes and jewelry. He said: "There is no doubt it belonged to the dead girl."

CURLEY READY TO BATTLE FOR LIGHT CONTRACT

Mayor Curley claims that the terms of the proposed electric street lighting contract are the best his administration can get under existing conditions because the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of this city appears to be part of a great trust.

"It isn't altogether what the city ought to get, but what we can secure," he insists. "I don't see how we can do any better now, for I believe that street lighting is practically every large city in the country is controlled by a sort of trust.

"This talk of a municipal plant sounds nice, but conditions in Boston too today practically make impossible either the rejection of the contract or the following out of this suggestion.

The Mayor, on the other hand, acknowledged that he had not read anything more than the bare headlines of the statement made in the Sunday AMERICAN by M. L. Cooke, director of the Philadelphia Department of Public Works, in which it was conclusively shown that $70 a year for arc lights was a more-than-fair price to pay.

He later promised to give this statement careful study, however, while at the same time insisting that the pending contract should be ratified by the City Council because of the nominal saving of $50,000 a year supposed to come to the city.

Police Hunt Boys Escaped from Schools

The police of Boston and other cities and towns in the State are searching for escaping boys. Two who made a dash for liberty from the State School at Wrentham were caught early today near Woonsocket, R. I. Two out of five who escaped from the Parental School at Roxbury have been caught. The police are looking for the other three.

The two who escaped at Wrentham are Samuel Eldridge and Simon Frazier, each fourteen. They boarded a trolley for Woonsocket, but were captured when they left the car on the outskirts of that city.

William McGee, William McDonald, William Hopewell, Frank Pierce and Patrick Dunphy, all fifteen and all clad in blue shirts and khaki trousers, left the Parental School in Roxbury. Which two of the five are the ones who were captured the school authorities do not say.

$40,000 LOSS IN SOMERVILLE 2-ALARM FIRE

A garage, four auto trucks, a runabout, a large wagon shed with five wagons and drays, a stable and adjoining shed with hay and grain and a two-story dwelling house were destroyed and Flagg Hall was damaged, a congested tenement district was thrown into an uproar and $40,000 damage was done by a two-alarm fire on Medford and Linwood streets, Somerville, today.

A large underground tank filled with gasoline was in the fire territory. The firemen were constantly exposed to danger of an explosion.

Four roof fires on tenement houses were started. These, with the clouds of smoke, terrified the tenement dwellers, mostly Syrians, Italians and others of foreign birth or descent. The men had gone to work, but the women and children hustled goods together and started to get out in haste.

The fire started, from cause so far unknown, in a one-story wooden shed owned by the Jackson & Newton Company, manufacturers of doors, sashes and blinds, and used as a garage. The plant is numbered 30 to 43 Maple street. The fire was first seen by Mrs. Flagg, wife of ex-Alderman Ernest Flagg, who was at breakfast.

The garage was destroyed. The flames spread to a two-story wooden stable and storehouse, 30x75 feet, used by the Jackson & Newton Company. The roof was damaged. Three horses were saved.

A wagon shed of the same company was licked up, with five wagons and drays.

The Jackson & Newton Company's loss is figured at $25,000.

Then the flames jumped toward a string of four stables on Linwood street, owned by Cornelius Howen, cafe owner. These stables sheltered seventy wagons, four trucks and 100 horses at night. All were out on jobs at this time except twelve horses and three wagons. These were saved by Charles McCarthy and Michael Buckley, foremen. One of the stables, a two-story, sixteen-stall structure and a hay and grain shed adjoining were burned; loss $6,000.

A two-story frame house on Maple street, owned by the Patrick Bowden heirs and occupied by Michael and Elizabeth Howden, was damaged $1,000.

Catholic Prelates Gather in Lourdes

LOURDES, France, July 21.—Ten Cardinals, among them Cardinal Farley of New York city, 200 archbishops and bishops from all parts of the world are to attend the International Eucharistic Congress to be held here this year, starting tomorrow and lasting until July 26.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON

The "Maxwell 25," which no such excellent work in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, proves itself to be good if not better record on the country and highways of the country, is that, too, in the hands of private owners and not trained experts. Manager Fred H. Lemon of the Hartford Co. of Boston, is authority for this statement. He says: "The success of this is really wonderful, and I am surprised at such excellent material and attention to detail and finish can be given a motor vehicle selling at a moderate price as does the Maxwell 25. This car is a creditable piece of work and has given a splendid record of itself."

The comparatively new organization of the foreign cars in the recent South City race meet, has caused surprising until thereat looks hopefully known. Many of these cars have distinguished honors at Indianapolis and were expected to repeat the same at Sioux City. But the honors passed from the charge of foreign to American drivers, the latter knowing more about the minor constructive details than did the men from abroad. Manufacturers will improve their speed. In the assembly of the same something must have happened, as one of the best drivers of the drivers found himself with a finished car and a whole floor of extra parts, and none of them used in actual competition had the slightest care possessed prior to the race. The process, but they did have a little more trouble.

J. S. Donovan, of the Donovan Motor Co., distributors of the Studebaker cars, has just returned from a tended visit to the gigantic plant of the Studebaker Corporation at Detroit. Mr. Donovan is delighted with the conditions he found, not only in the plant, but throughout the Motor City. West, where, says he, "business is booming, is on the mend, and indications for future successes are particularly bright." He was personally accompanied by Superintendent of Service Benson and Sales Manager Oliver on the shooting made by his company during the past week-end, which he might be to safely Boston in a particular bright Studebaker stronghold.

NORTH SHORE SOCIETY PLAY FOR SALEM AID

Among recent brides just back from their honeymoon is Mrs. Daniel F. Clifford, who before her marriage was pretty Leonora McCarthy, daughter of Lieutenant John J. McCarthy of the Fire Department and Mrs. McCarthy. Mr. Clifford is the son of Thomas Clifford of Roxbury.

The wedding took place in St. Peter's Church, Roxbury. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward E. Kenney. Miss Daisy McCarthy, a sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and Ralph Clifford, brother of the groom, was best man.

The young couple are to live at No. 264 Quincy street, Dorchester.

Lieutenant and Mrs. George S. Patten, Jr., of Fort Meyer, Va., are guests of Mrs. Patten's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer, at their beautiful estate at Pride's Crossing.

* * *

An amateur performance of "The Climax" is to be given at the Larcom Theatre, Beverly, for the benefit of the Salem fire sufferers, on Tuesday evening, July 28, at 9 o'clock. The whole North Shore is evincing much interest and tickets are now on sale at the home of Mrs. Bryce J. Allan.

Mrs. Logan Hill will play the leading role. Burton R. Miller, Vinton Freedley and John King Hodges are others in the cast.

Tickets are also on sale at the homes of Mrs. Bayard Warren, at Pride's; Mrs. Neal Rantoul, Beverly Farms; Mrs. Reginald Boardman, West Manchester; Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, Jr., Hamilton; Mrs. C. H. W. Foster, Marblehead; Mrs. Homer B. Richardson, Nahant; also at the Ocean House, Swampscott, the Oceanside, Magnolia, the Masconomo, Manchester, and the Larcom Theatre.

Miss Susan Bistine is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles L. Smith, at Osterville. Later Miss Bistine will go to York Harbor, where she will be the guest of Mrs. Frank S. Evans of Philadelphia for August.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman of Boston and Washington are to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn at their place in Scotland.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Small Moore are coming to the North Shore from Chicago to spend July with the former's parents, Judge and Mrs. Moore, at Pride's Crossing.

MRS. DANIEL F. CLIFFORD, who was Miss Leonora McCarthy of Roxbury, one of society's recent brides.

Coxey's Army Survivor at Keith's a Hit

The act of Billy McDermott, the sole survivor of Coxey's army, who is at Keith's this week, is the funniest thing that has happened in Boston for months. At last night's performance he nearly caused a riot. When he wasn't exciting the audience to gales of laughter the sputterings of a half dozen half-hysterical women in front were boosting his act. He is one of those it-isn't-what-he-says-but-the-way-he-says-it persons, and the way he says it is enough.

The Meistersingers are on their last week's engagement, and yesterday proved as popular as ever with the audience. They have an entirely new set of songs and the funniest and men that have rattled bones since the days of Thatcher, Primrose and West.

Lew Fernikoff and Ethel Rose, exponents of the new dances, are giving a splendid exhibition, and amateur tangoists in Boston will want to see them and learn the new steps.

The motion pictures were taken of the manoeuvres at Lakeville during the encampment of the Second Brigade last week.

"Bathing Suits More Suggestive Than Nude Art"

Darius Cobb, the artist, believes that bathing suits or lifted skirts at muddy crossings are more suggestive than nude art in the Boston Art Museum. Replying to the charge of the Massachusetts Civic Alliance, that nude art at the museum makes it improper for school children to go there, he declares:

"The purest men in the world have given us paintings and statues entirely nude, and I find the purest men and women in the world approve them.

"I have several sons and daughters living, and in no case have I admonished them when they visited the Museum. I think bathing suits are far more suggestive, or a lifted skirt at a muddy crossing."

MAN FROM HOME OPENS MAJESTIC SUMMER SEASON

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Man from Home," the celebrated drama in which a person from Kokomo finds, put it all over the British aristocracy, was chosen to open the Summer season at the Majestic. It was performed twice yesterday to delighted audiences and seems to have started the latest stock venture very auspiciously.

Nearly everybody has seen or heard about this Tarkington play so we needn't bother with what it's about. It is a very palatable and edifying menu for the plain people, and as a light entertainment has had few superiors in recent years.

Let us remark here and now that the company collected by Manager Leahy is a strong one. If one paid $2 for a seat, he might justly claim that one or two members of the cast might be improved upon, but many a $2 road company gives far worse performances than this one.

In Carl Stowe, an actor has been found who thoroughly steeped in the Hoosier traditions as Hodge himself. He is a powerful and imposing personality and the part doesn't suffer in his hands.

Frederick Ormonde, as the Grand Duke, makes a strong, clean-cut impression. This role is next in importance to that of Pike and is skillfully played.

Donald Meek, as the horrible British cub, Americ Ki. Ashyn, has a part that reflects credit upon his comedy powers, and Florence Shirley cleverly suggests the snobbish little American girl who is shown a few things by the roan from home.

Raymond Capp was a conventional Earl of Hawcastle, and Augusta Gill satisfactory enough as the adventuress. D. J. Shea did rather well with the dialect part of Mariano. George Conboy was a sincere and effective Ivanoff.

Rose Morrison didn't do anything at all with the part of Lady Creech, and Joseph Crehan didn't impress very much as the young American admirer of the British aristocracy.

But taken upon the whole it was a very satisfactory performance of a good old play, and it augurs well for the coming weeks.

Bowdoin Square.

The rollicking burlesque presented by the Merrie Maids of Violet Dale Cottage at the Bowdoin Square is filling that playhouse this hot weather. The moving pictures and vaudeville are always high class. On Wednesday night a Tango contest. This is the last week of the Lucille Love series.

NEWS OF ATTRACTIONS AT THE BOSTON THEATRES

Shubert.

Hadley's African Hunt pictures are attracting large audiences twice daily to the Shubert. The Wanderobos, the natives and the funny baboons amuse the young and old alike, while such facts as the dumbness of the giraffe amaze even the most instructed.

Bass Point.

Numerous out-of-door attractions at Bass Point keep visitors well entertained, while the shore dinners of the various hotels are famous. The tempting to the modern dance, the fakirs and other features are very interesting. The Nahant steamship line with three boats is giving the best service this resort ever had, while the three boats of the Bass Point-Revere line make the visit to the Point very convenient. The dance hall upon Ocean Pier at Revere has a wonderful location and is the coolest at the beach.

At the Relay House there are daily concerts by Miss Pyne Cowan's Ladies' Orchestra and on Sundays concerts by the Eighth Regiment Band. The Cabaret show at the Bass Point House is a feature.

Norumbega.

A cartoon comedy "The Dinghat Family" is holding the boards at Norumbega this week. It is full of bright lines and has a pretty chorus. There is excellent car service from Dudley street and from the Park street subway. The Allen Stanford Orchestra in the Grape Arbor is a feature.

Lexington Park.

It's a big vaudeville show this week at Lexington Park. "Polly's Troubles," with Ellesley and Otice, head the bill. Jack Birchland, contortionist; McPhersons, singers; John Leonard, comedian; Lombardian Duo in a musical act, are on the bill. The ope nair Casino and the Zoological Gardens are of interest.

Keith's.

The strongest cast of Boston favorites ever assembled together for one play is promised at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of July 27, when Eleanor Gordon, Wilson Melrose, Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Francesca Retter and Franklyn Searight will appear in a one-act playlet entitled "Patsy." Both Miss Gordon and Mrs. Hibbard have appeared in vaudeville, each at the head of her own company, but Mr. Melrose has never been seen in the two-a-day field. The engagement of all these favorites for a single production makes the event of great interest among Boston theatregoers, where Miss Gordon, Mrs. Hibbard and Mr. Melrose each has a large following.

Theatre Modern.

Edmund Breese in "The Master Mind" was the first photo play at the new Modern on Washington street yesterday. The sterling actor and Boston favorite had not before been seen on the movies, and the play itself, although said to be his greatest, had never reached Boston. The accompanying features and pictures were equally attractive.

Orpheum.

At this theatre, yesterday, an exceptionally good vaudeville bill was presented, featuring Mae West, the original Brinkley Girl, followed by Leonard & Whitney, old favorites here, in "Duffy's Rise," a high class comedy offering which kept the audience laughing from start to finish; Dow and Dow, Hebrew comedians; the Brooklyn Comedy Four, in harmony and comedy; Lorenz & Swor, comedy and piano originalities; Blanche Sloane (only sister of Ted Sloane), a lady aerialist; Mahoney and Tremont, in an original offering, and Burke and Walsh, in comedy and song.

St. James.

The Roland West players in a bright and entertaining new comedy playlet in two scenes, entitled "Wifey," was a decided success at this playhouse yesterday. Other novel features on the bill included Merlin, the loquacious comedian and his pack of cards; Gladys Wilbur, that dainty singing comedienne; the Reckless Trio, wonderful trapeze performers; Daniels and Conrad, introducing a new specialty, and Warren and Blanchard, comedians par excellence.

Provincetown Trips.

The Dorothy Bradford, the staunch and palatial steamer of the Cape Cod Line, makes daily trips to Provincetown from Bay Line Wharf, Atlantic Avenue. At Provincetown there is plenty to beguile the time allowed on shore, including the many historic landmarks and the shore dinner specialities which the hotels are offering.

Paragon Palm Garden.

The program of entertainment in the Cabaret in the Palm Garden at Paragon Park, Nantasket, this week is by far the best of the season so far. One of last season's Palm Garden favorites has returned after an engagement at the Winter Garden in New York. Vera Sobrina is the name and toe dancing is her specialty. Then there are La Petite Sisters, offering a novel dancing specialty, and Barney Stone and the Desmond Sisters in their clever dancing novelty. Last week's big favorite, Mlle. Emerie, has been held over for another week owing to popular demand.

In the Dansants the amateur dancing contest last night was even more popular than that last week. In the free open-air circus this week a startling and spectacular features is Venus De Nuit.

Scollay Square Olympia.

"The Garden Party," a musical comedy with twelve people in the cast, proved a pleasing entertainment at the Olympia last night; Kelley Forrest, a tramp comedian; Maymo Remington and Mulatto Four; Flora Vernon, the dancing violinist; the "Devil's Mate," a novelty sketch with electrical effects; Archer and Ingersoll, Mexican Herman, and of course the latest and most attractive motion pictures.

Correct Way to Treat Skin Diseases

Both air and water seem to have a bad effect upon skin diseases like Eczema, of which there are many forms. Keeping out the water and air is the first thing to do. By using Cadum, the well-known remedy for skin diseases, air and water are excluded, because Cadum contains petrolatum and white wax, and these form a tight covering over the sore places upon the skin. Cadum also contains oil of cade, which has been successfully used many years by the medical profession in the treatment of Eczema and other skin trouble. If your skin is inflamed, irritated or sore, get a 10c box of Cadum of your druggist and try it. The 25c size box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size and is cheaper to buy.

PLAYERS WIN DISPUTE OVER THE KRAFT CASE; KRAFT GOES TO NEWARK

DOUBLES START AT LONGWOOD; FAVORITES WIN

A good gallery was out when play opened this morning in the annual eastern doubles tennis championship at the Longwood cricket grounds, Brookline, the fourth round of the singles was also reached, all the stars holding up to their reputations. But one default marred the mornings play, Harold McKinnon of Providence being forced to default to F. C. Inman of New York because of a bruised ankle.

The feature match of the day was expected to be the singles clash late in the afternoon between Melville H. national champion, and Nat Emlen, former Harvard star.

Another big match in the same round was looked for when Clothier and R Norris Williams came together.

The summary:

EASTERN DOUBLES.

FIRST ROUND.

W. P. Hallowell and G. Newell defeated R. C. Bray and C. F. Wales, 6—3, 7—5, 6—3.

SECOND ROUND (UPPER HALF).

S. Thayer and H. A. Lawton defeated S. W. Wightman and R. I. Brown, 6—4, 8—2, 7—5.

LONGWOOD SINGLES.

FOURTH ROUND.

F. C. Banks, New York, defeated H. McKinney, Providence, by default.

A. S. Dabney, Boston, defeated L. Stebbs, Narragansett, 6—0, 6—2, 6—0.

F. B. Alexander, Philadelphia, defeated W. Rosenbaum, New York, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1.

F. C. Inman, New York, defeated A. N. Reggio, Boston, 6—3, 6—3.

R. L. Murray, San Francisco, defeated R. Dana, Boston, 6—2, 6—3, 8—3.

G. V. Putnam, Boston, defeated A. G. Thomas, Boston, 6—0, 6—4, 6—1.

Dreyfuss Denies Trade with Dodgers

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 21.—The story coming from the East about the proposed trading of Max Carey to Brooklyn for an infielder has no foundation of fact, according to Barney Dreyfuss.

"That tale arose in the mind of a Brooklyn newspaperman here with the Dodgers this week, and is simply a wish of his, and we have no intention of letting Carey go to any other team unless we can get as good a man in his place," said Dreyfuss. "As far as that is concerned, any of our team will be traded if we can do so to our advantage and not otherwise. That means that neither Carey nor any other player will be traded, for all the managers in the league are looking for the best of trades. We not trade where we do not gain, but we are willing to pay good money for new players that will do better than the ones we have."

McGinnity Invents Rapid Ground Dryer

TACOMA, Wash., July 21.— "Iron Man" McGinnity, president of the Tacoma Northwestern League, formerly a Giant twirler or pitcher, is enthusiastic today over a ground drying machine he has invented.

The machine is similar to a huge blow torch, is about four feet long, and mounted on three wheels. Four distillate burners furnish the heat. After a hard night's rain McGinnity claims the machine will dry out the diamond in two hours.

Milan Will Be Back in Game Next Week

WASHINGTON, July 21.—It is announced that the injuries of Clyde Milan, centerfielder of the Washington Americans, are not so serious as at first believed. Milan crashed into Danny Moeller going after a fly ball Friday and chipped his lower jawbone. He will be back in the game in about a week, it is said.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

DONIE BUSH OF THE TIGERS IS ONE OF the best fielders of either league, but he is also a hard hitter this season, and as already shown, is batting around the .300 mark.

BERT DANIELS WOULD BE BACK IN the big league but for his weakness in throwing. It is now in the minors. The Braves were looking him over in the spring, but his throwing arm let him down.

LARRY DOYLE ONCE WITH THE Giants, is making such a record in the Southern League that he is being mentioned as a possible recruit for the Yankees. It has been rumored that the Yanks will get Doyle if they can make a trade.

THE PLAYER WHICH JIMMY ARCHER of the Cubs resembles most closely both the cast and style of batting is Jimmy Walsh, the former Boston American outfielder, now with Cleveland.

OWEN, QUINN AND WHAT WAS SENT TO Grand Rapids? Some infielder, also by the Yankees, is the answer. He was leading the league in batting when he was sent to the Michigan city.

PETE FALSEY, THE OLD OUTFIELDER, has reported to Manager Clarke at Pittsburg. Falsey has been batting around .300 in the Texas league all season, and although he was not very strong with the stick, he was a very good fielder and a fast man on the bases.

PRESIDENT THOMAS L. OF THE WHITE Sox has purchased Allen, a left handed pitcher of the Grand Forks team of the Northern League. He is a tall youngster, has been batting well and is a fast outfielder. He will report to the Sox about August 1.

J. FRANKLIN BAKER HAS RECOVERED the batting habit and is hitting like he did in 1912 and 1913. Baker is a dangerous batter, has already had several clouts, and is batting them over the right field fence at Shibe Park.

THE ST. LOUIS FEDERAL LEAGUE owners are getting ready to find a new manager. Three Finger Brown, who was one of the managers, has been released by the Chicago Federals, and the other managers of the Missouri enterprise are busying themselves to secure a new leader. Jimmy Austin, who was with the Yanks, was offered to Roger Bresnahan, who was let go as manager of the Cardinals.

PLAYERS VICTORIOUS; BAN JOHNSON BEATEN

league players tomorrow was brought about through the transfer of Kraft from the Newark club, a Class AA organization, to Nashville, a class A club, by the National Commission.

It looked as if the strike would take place until Ebbetts arrived in New York today. He got into communication with the owners of the Nashville club at once, despite the advice of Ban Johnson to stand firm against the players organization.

"I acted on my own account without consulting anyone," said Ebbetts, "I saw that there was a chance to have organized baseball free from awkward position and took advantage of it."

Ebbetts at once notified the National Commission of the action he had taken and it was approved.

MAGNATES IN SESSION.

With both sides breathing defiance the magnates of the National and American Leagues met in New York today to take steps to prevent the threatened strike.

As the heads of the two leagues began their session David L. Fultz, president of the Players' Fraternity, who presented the ultimatum to the National Commission, declared:

"Ban Johnson will close no parks, as he has threatened to do. He says the boys are fighting, but they are not bluffing, but on the contrary are in deep earnest, and will most assuredly back up the board of directors of the Players' Fraternity in whatever move it sees fit to make."

While the incident which brought the trouble to a head concerns the transfer of Charles A. Kraft, who is compelled to play with the Nashville Club at a reduction of salary of $150 a month, Fultz declares that this is only one of many grievances which the players have against the National Commission.

President Johnson of the American League held a long conference over the long-distance telephone with Charles H. Ebbetts, owner of the Brooklyn Club in the National League and the Newark Club.

"Do not dispose of Kraft until after Wednesday," was what Johnson, his idea being to force the Players' Fraternity to take the aggressive. Ebbetts had threatened to call the strike tomorrow unless the National Commission rescinded its decision in the Kraft case.

EXPECTS TROUBLE.

Johnson evidently expected trouble of a serious nature, but word has come from players on practically all of the big league teams that they would obey the edicts.

Fultz gave out a long statement today in which he said:

"While the Kraft controversy is now the main issue between organized baseball and the members of the Players' fraternity, its only one of the causes of difference. We were assured last Winter that most of our requests were fair, and they were conceded to us by contract known as the Cincinnati agreement. That agreement has been violated by the team owners dozens of times this season. Players have been released without the preliminary notice. One of the players signed a contract with the ten-day clause stricken out. He was transferred to another team and foolishly signed a contract with the clause in it. Shortly afterwards he was told that if he did not consent to a reduction of $100 a month in his salary he would be released.

"These various matters might have been worked out with the National Commission in time had not the Kraft trouble been precipitated upon us. Our agreement provides that before a major league player can be sent to a Class A team he must be submitted to all Class AA teams. Kraft was sent by Brooklyn to Newark, a Class AA team. The National Commission then decided that he was a Class A player, and sent him to Nashville, an A team, where his salary would be cut $150 a month. The player has been suspended without pay for more than a month by this order of the commission. The commission says he is being suspended under the national agreement.

"NO COMPROMISE."

"Our agreement states specifically that it supersedes any conflicting legislation wherever found. In addition, Kraft has an agreement with Newark with a ten-day clause and the disability clause omitted. This contract the commission now wishes to ignore. We have made every possible effort to adjust the difference, but the commission refuses to cooperate."

Before the magnates got together at the Walcott Hotel, Johnson counselled all of them to adopt a "no-compromise" attitude. The American League executive repeatedly expressed the belief that the players would not strike, saying that the majority of the men on the big teams were satisfied with conditions and salaries under which they are working.

Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, who was hastily summoned to join the powwow, said:

"There is no occasion for a strike. I do know that the men in the National League will stand loyal. The National League will stand shoulder to shoulder with the American League."

Dispatches from the cities where the two major leagues have teams playing at present showed a division of feeling. The members of the Athletics were opposed to Fultz' attitude. The men on the White Sox, on the other hand, were dissatisfied and were evidently in favor of a strike. Manager Mack of the Athletics and the Phillies were reported to have said that the members of these teams would obey any order issued.

Fred Merkle of the Giants was quoted in a similar vein, although Manager McGraw of that club declared that his men would remain loyal to their uniforms.

Frank Chance, manager of the New York American League club, declared his men would stick. On the other hand, it was believed that the St. Louis Browns, Brooklyn Tip-Tops and the Cleveland Naps would quit.

ONCE A BRAVES.

Kraft was with New Orleans last year and was drafted by Brooklyn. This Spring he came to Boston by the waiver route and then returned to Brooklyn in similar fashion. Then Brooklyn turned him over to Newark. Nashville, however, put in a claim for the player, stating that it had a right to his services prior to even that of the New Orleans team. This was upheld by the governing body of baseball and the much traveled Kraft was ordered to his far Sunny South. But the union declared otherwise.

A player, according to the heads of the Fraternity, who is drafted and then found unfitting for the big show, should be sent back to a league of higher classification than that from which he was originally taken, although he can be sent back to a league such league would care to have him. This contention, however, is held as invalid by the Commission, though the players claim it is the correct interpretation of what is known as the Cincinnati agreement between the two bodies.

Wherefore the present battle.

Cubs Strive to Keep Bresnahan from Feds

CHICAGO, July 21.—The Chicago Nationals are today investigating the report that Manager Bresnahan is considering an offer to manage the St. Louis Federal League club, and are trying their best to head off the proposed deal.

Secret negotiations have been going on for a week, and encouraged by the Appellate Court's opinion, which knocked out the ten-day clause in contracts, President Steiniger of the Federals came to Chicago for the purpose of talking over the move with Bresnahan and with League President James A. Gilmore.

Queen Quality Nine to Play All-Woburn

The Queen Quality baseball team has arranged a game with the strong All-Woburn nine, to be played at Woburn on Saturday, August 1. These teams rank among the best semi-professional nines in New England and the game should be a close one. The Jamaica Plain team has lost the services of its star battery, Johnny Murray and Sweetland, but Manager John Goodsell has not been idle and will put a battery on the field that will be as effective as the former stars.

GREAT VICTORY FOR FEDERALS IN CHASE CASE

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 21.—The Federal League won another big victory here this morning when Supreme Court Justice Herbert P. Bissell dissolved the injunction of the Chicago American League baseball team restraining Hal Chase, the first baseman, from playing with the Buffalo Federal League team.

Chase jumped from the White Sox about a month ago and after playing one game in St. Louis came to Buffalo. He was kept in hiding for several days at Niagara Falls, and spirited to Buffalo by automobile a few hours before the Buffaloes were to play on their return home.

He played two innings and was stopped by the injunction when Sheffield Becker walked onto the field and served the papers on him. Charles Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, came to Buffalo and engaged attorneys to fight the action that followed. Long arguments were made on both sides. Justice Bissell's opinion covers twenty-five pages of typewritten copy.

One of the principal points in the decision rendered by Justice Bissell refers to the question of the mutuality of the contract between baseball and employe. Chase, by means of the reserve clause in his contract, was bound to organized baseball for five, while the ten-day release clause permitted the club to release him on ten days' notice. Justice Bissell holds that the contract was not mutual, and therefore not valid.

Make Plans for Big Springfield Day

SPRINGFIELD, July 21.—Plans were completed at a meeting of fans here tonight for a big "Springfield day" similar to the Maranville day of a year ago, to be held on August 1 when the Braves will be playing in Boston. The St. Louis Cardinals will be the Braves' opponents at that time and a number of Windsor Locks' fans are joining in the movement as Packy O'Connor, one of the Cardinal's catchers, is a Windsor Locks resident. Mann and Maranville, of course, will be on hand to get their share of attention from the local rooters.

Brooksides Out to Land State Title

With eleven straight victories to their credit, the Brookside A. C. of Roxbury is out to land the semi-professional championship of Greater Boston. The Brooksides have some fast, speed players in their lineup and hope to continue their fine record of wins for the rest of the season. The Roxbury club is without a game for Saturday and would like to book a contest with one of the strongest nines in the State. Telephone William Canty, Roxbury 4454-W.

Mrs. Howe Winner at Bristol.

BRISTOL, R. I., July 21.—In the championship round in women's singles in the Bristol County tennis tournament Mrs. Willis E. Howe defeated Miss Mollie Hamill in straight sets, 6—3, 6—1, taking two of the three wins necessary to entitle her to permanent ownership of the Senator Dixon Cup, presented three years ago.

Franklin Park Golf Links to be Closed

The golf course at Franklin Park will be closed for the next four days, beginning today, by order of Chairman Dillon of the Park Commission. Superintendent Jos Howe of the Franklin Park courses received this order yesterday. It is on account of the big picnic to be held there and it was thought dangerous to have golf balls flying around where there were so many children. The links will be in shape again for play Saturday.

Boston American Team Beats Globe

The Boston AMERICAN baseball team defeated the Globe team by a score of 6 to 2 at Bridge Field, Cambridge, yesterday and tightened its grip on first place in the Newspaper League. The winners played heady baseball. Snow pitched a good game and a trick play in the first inning by his team mates pulled him out of his only bad hole. Triples by Archdecon and Woodworth figured in the victory. Archdecon and Doherty collided, the former being badly hurt but pluckily remained in the game.

CHAMPIONS BATTLE AT REVERE

RACING PROGRAM.

Motor-paced race, 25 miles—Didier, Wiley, Carman.

Sprint match—Moretto vs Cavanaugh

Five-mile amateur handicap—Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs and one-mile professional.

Unless all signs fail the three-cornered 25-mile motor paced race at the Revere Cycle track tonight between George Wiley, America's middle distance champion; Leon Didier, the French titlist, and Clarence Carman should be the most evenly contested event of the season.

Certainly the material is there, and if the riders live up to form the "fans" should get their full of thrills before the contest is over.

Rivalling the big race for interest will be the match sprint event between Caesar Moretti, the Italian champion, and Frank Cavanaugh, one of the most popular riders that ever rode at the beach. The regular list of professional and amateur open races will go to make up the program, and these, too, should provide plenty of close finishes.

In bringing together Wiley, Didier and Carman in the star motor paced race, Manager Nat Butler has secured the banner event of the season. With Walthour out, this trio of stars stand out as the leaders of their class, and tonight should bring out the best man at 25 miles. All three rode true to form in a race at Brighton Beach on Sunday, and will doubtless put up another great race this evening.

Moretti rides his first race at Revere tonight. He comes here with a great record, his most recent victim being Al Grenda, the big Australian speed merchant.

Plan Few Changes on Cup Defenders

NEW YORK, July 21.—Alexander Smith Cochran's cup defence yacht Vanitie and the Tri-city syndicate sloop Defiance both lay at anchor in City Island roads today.

It is understood that no radical alterations will be made in the sail and spar plan of the Vanitie, these in charge of the yacht believing that she is in about as fine racing condition as possible, since she was able to finish one second ahead of the Resolute last Saturday.

The Vanitie will be hauled out at Jacobs' yard in a few days to have her bronze hull polished for the New York Yacht Club cruise.

George M. Fynchon, the managing owner of the Defiance, said today that no important changes are contemplated in that yacht's sail plan, but that some minor alterations and repairs will be made before she is hauled out to have her hull put in perfect condition for the cruise and the races which are to follow it.

4 STAR BOUTS AT THE ATLAS CLUB TONIGHT

ATLAS A. A. PROGRAM.

Eddie Flynn vs. Walter Butler.
Joe Farren vs. "Young" Jasper.
Terry Brooks vs. Andy Cortes.
Frankie Mack vs. Jack Read.

By JACK CONWAY.

WITH forty rounds of boxing scheduled, the dear old fight "fans" should witness plenty of action at the Atlas A. A. tonight. Four ten-round bouts have been arranged, and as the rival glove men are well matched there should be some hard, fast battles.

The feature event of the evening will be between Frankie Mack, the clever Beachmont lightweight, and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight champion, who has been making Boston his home for the past year. Mack is one of the best 133-pound performers in New England and he expects to win from Read.

The Beachmont youth is a sweet boxer and has developed into a rugged fighter since he went under the management of Leo Flynn. Mack proved he is able to hold his own with the best of them when he held Matty Baldwin to a fifteen-round draw at Marieville, R. I., last Winter.

Read has had few chances to show against the star men in his class since he came to this country, but in his limited number of contests with prominent ring men he has given a fine account of himself and he expects to breeze, sure, in a winner tonight.

THERE is considerable interest being shown in the whirl between Joe Farren, Lou Kelley's East Boston champion, and "Young" Jasper of the North End. Farren and Jasper fought at a recent show of the Atlas Club and Jasper won a hairline decision at the end of eight rounds of hard fighting. Al Delmont has prepared Jasper for tonight's encounter and he believes that his protege will again prove Farren's master. Farren, however, is not doing a great deal of worrying about the contest and says that he will have a comfortable margain in his favor when the "go" ends. Lou Kelley believes that Farren is one of the best boxers of his weight in New England and he asserts that if Farren wins from Jasper he will hurl a challenge at the leading welterweights in these parts.

THERE should be few dull moments when Terry Brooks of the West End and Andy Cortes, who resides in Brooklyn, exchange blows. Neither of these young men has ever been accused of being a Kilbane or a Welsh within the hemp ropes. They are sluggers pure and simple and usually rely upon the power of their fists in order to win their battles. Brooks is one of the hardest hitters in this section of the country and he will try and flatten Cortes if possible.

THE bout between Eddie Flynn, the Lynn lightweight, and Walter Butler of Beachmont should be a spirited affair. It will be the third meeting between these two boys. They met several weeks ago before the University Club in Cambridge and Butler was awarded the decision after an interesting tussle. The last bout was staged at the Arena a week ago and it was declared a draw after eight rounds of give and take fighting. Flynn had a slight shade on Butler in that bout, but the Beachmont boy was given a draw on account of his aggressiveness.

All-star cards usually furnish more real sport than the so-called feature bouts. Consequently, a good-sized crowd of fistic lovers is expected to turn out in oder to witness the festivities.

White Sox Buy Player.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Charles A. Comiskey, president of the White Sox, has purchased Altman, an outfielder, from the Frank Forks team of the Northern League.

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

TRIS SPEAKER'S game-winning smash in the sixteenth rounded out a great day's work. The big centerfielder, as though to show that trading him would be the height of folly, pulled down eight flies, cut in a beautiful assist to the plate that killed a seemingly sure Tiger tally and whaled out three clean hits, one a two sack affair. He reached on another occasion on a rather excusable error by Bush. In fact the blow was chalked up as a hit by several scorers. And just for good measure, Tris stole two bases.

* * *

ONE of the niftiest stunts in the entire stirring contest was the lightning quick manner in which Scotty made it known to the world in general that he had been "fanned" by one of Reynold's shoots in the final frame. Almost before the ball had passed the plate the young shortstop was up, rubbing his wrist and crabbing at Umpire Egan. He looked so much in earnest that his umps wished him along to first, though it's up to E. Mint to a Mexican penny that, had Scott left it to Egan without a howl, he never would have been awarded free transportation. And the fast crowd the corners and set the stage for the Speaker slam.

SAID slam, had more than one run been needed would surely have done the trick, as it was ticketed at least a double the moment it left the bat. Veach made a desperate effort but never had a ghost of a chance of reaching the pill.

* * *

THE surest thing in the world is that one Dutch Leonard is easily the greatest southpaw pitcher now in the game. His remarkable performance yesterday in holding the slugging Tigers hitless for eight full innings is one of the best pitching records in baseball history. All year long this Canuck individual has been twirling wonderful ball, and nowadays his appearance in the box is equivalent to a Red Sox win. By no means the poorest part of his work yesterday was his fanning of Wahoo Sam Crawford twice in succession. The same kind of a catastrophe has not hit Sam for lo, these many moons.

BIG Dick Hoblitzel, who introduced himself in a Boston act of spanking yesterday, sure played a swell game around the initial hassock, though he didn't manage to get in a safe blow. He had the honor, however, of scoring the first Boston run, reaching by grace of Dauss' wildness, stealing and coming through when Yerkes belted out a single in the fourth session. He was the victim of two fast fielding kills, Crawford preparing a hard liner in the opening inning and Bush pulling down a difficult twisting short outfield fly in the thirteenth. Either one of the bumps had they dropped safely would have stored away the game for the Red Sox.

FRED COUPPAS surely pitched a shutout game if ever a pitcher did and from the way he held back the Bengals, looks fully good enough to be handed over a regular assignment by Carrigan. Two errors on simple chances, one by Scott and the other of his doing greased the slide for his retirement.

OF the galaxy of great fielding plays that starred the contest, a couple turned in by Larry Gardner and Yerkes took the cake. Larry made a wonderful driving p ckup of a wicked smash by High in the twelfth, came up like a bomb from its mortar and got the ball to first, yards ahead of the speedy Tiger. It was a play that called back the old Gardner of a few years ago, who was generally admitted to be the greatest fielding third sacker in the game.

YERKES undid his circus performance in the fourteenth, robbing Hellman, first man up, of what was ticked a sure safety by a great jumping one-hand catch. He was just able to reach the ball with a couple of fingers of his gloved hand, but managed to cling onto it and thereby stopped a possible Tiger spurt.

PRESIDENT LANNIN, while somewhat anxious about the threatened players' strike is certain that the matter will be settled without coming to a final showdown. He is a strong believer in the baseball players' rights and says very openly that if a strike was ordered he would expect his men to walk out, just as would the members of any union in case of strike.

* * *

VICE President Rickart of the Federal League wires that the new organization is not just now trying to buy any property in Boston. But it's a safe bet that if the present bout between the National Commish and the Fraternity is not halted with much promptness the owners of large fields in and about Boston will have opportunity to converse financially with mysterious looking strangers well healed as far as funds go. And a third team here wouldn't be such a bad proposition either.

* * *

THREE hours of baseball Saturday, a little more yesterday and a double header today surely have provided plenty of amusement for the long distance fans. And yesterday's turnout of more than 6,000 was a splendid tribute to the drawing power of the Tigers. Two more days and the noble Braves, with all kinds of western scalps at their belts, will be in our midst. If they could only hit the clip at home that they show on the road, they would sail to the head of the class like a sky rocket.

Pres. Wilson Declines Lipton's Invitation

FALMOUTH, Eng., July 21.—Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America Cup, reached this port under convoy of the steam yacht Erin. She had a rough passage from Plymouth, but Sir Thomas said she had behaved splendidly in the easterly gale, increasing his confidence that she would lift the cup.

The Mayor of Falmouth and the members of the Corporation went aboard the Erin and wished Sir Thomas good luck in his voyage across the ocean and in his quest for the cup.

Sir Thomas has received a letter from President Wilson, expressing regret that the President could not accept the invitation to board the Shamrock during the races, and assuring him that he would warmly welcome him again.

Many Bid for Kirby.

Larue Kirby, who is playing in the outfield for the Memphis team of the Southern League, will be in the big league next season again. Seven clubs have bid for his services. Kirby broke into the big leagues as a pitcher with the Giants.

BRAVES OUT TO TAKE SECOND FROM PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, July 21.—Manager George Stallings is expected to trot out Big Bill James to face the Pirates this afternoon in the second game of the series, and if this be the case the Braves should add another game to the victory list. James has always been effective against the local team, and today should be no exception.

The Braves are an ambitious lot and expect to get into the first division today. This is possible should the Braves win while Cincinnati and Philadelphia are defeated.

Manager Fred Clark is anxious that his team get out of the cellar position, and will send Marty O'Toole or Cousman against the Braves this afternoon.

The Braves won the first of the series, 1 to 0, due to the good pitching of George Tyler and the wildness of the local pitcher in the final inning.

The break of the game came in the very last frame, when it looked as though the contest might go into extra innings. Each side had had men on throughout the game, but could not get the necessary punch to bring over the run needed to put either team into seventh place.

In the ninth Schmidt led off with a clean single to centre field, and went to second on "Chuck" Deal's neat sacrifice. Mann came up determined to break up the game and hit a mighty swipe to the right centre corner of the lot. Both Mensor and Mitchell started at the crack of the bat, and both got under the sphere, only to stop and look at each other while the ball fell between them. Schmidt only got from second to third because he expected the ball to be caught, while Mann reached second on the hit.

With Whaling up, it looked good for the Stallings crew, but Cooper got orders to pass him, although there was only one man down. Manager Stallings fooled Clark by recalling Tyler and sending up Gowdy to bat for him. The Pirate pitcher had trouble locating the plate, and Gowdy smiled at Umpire Devore, who had been put in to run for Schmidt, came romping over the pan with the winning run.

Big Gaelic Football Game Next Saturday

The followers of Gaelic football in these parts are to be treated to one of the finest contests ever staged in or around the Hub when the Irish Provinces of Connaught and Munster meet at the first monster athletic carnival of the Irish-American A. A. at the Locust street grounds next Saturday. The Munster aggregation, which is captained by Joseph R. Rhea, who also captains the County Kerry team, predicts a victory for his team, while John J. Kelly, who captains the opposing team, Connaught, and who also captains the County Galway team, is likewise confident that his team will be returned a winner on Saturday.

RED SOX BATTLE BROWNS IN TWO GAMES TODAY

The day of the double-header is back in the land. Out at the Fenway Park yard this afternoon the Browns go to the mat with the Red Sox in one of the extra game affairs.

The visitors, who will be the last of the foreigners to invade the Back Bay until the team gets back home from its next Western tour, should be in good double-header condition, as they had a practice session with the Yanks yesterday and cleaned up both ends.

But then, the Red Sox are also in pretty good fettle for some long drawn out sessions as their last two affairs with the Tigers gave them a couple of days with three hours of very strenuous work in each.

A double win today, while the Tigers are losing, will put the Red Sox in second place.

With Hooper back in right and Hobby on first the team looks a lot better than it did a few days ago. Hooper signalized his return to the ranks by battering out four hits yesterday, and while Hobby didn't get in a safe blow, he played a snappy game around the base and was robbed of a couple of safeties by star Tiger fielding.

Joe Wood, who has always been wonderfully effective against the present invadera, will most likely perform for the Sox in one of the games, while Hugh Bedient should start the other. In case either of the pair is not feeling fit, Rankin Johnson is about ready to be called. James and Taylor will probably work for the Hookers.

Pay $80,000 for 11 English Soccer Stars

LONDON, July 21.—Chelsea proposes to put a winning soccer football team in the field next Fall if money can accomplish that purpose. An all-star eleven has been purchased from various other clubs at a total cost of $80,000. Each man purchased is an internationalist, five having represented Scotland and six England.

Londoners are looking forward with great interest to the result of the costly experiment. Chelsea naturally hopes to win the pennant and soccer enthusiasts are wondering whether the individual stars will develop the team work necessary to do this.

Typos Play Benefit Ball Game Today

A benefit game will be played between the Boston Typo nine and the All-Stars at the National League grounds this afternoon for Player Gentill, who, while engaged in a Boston game, was injured. From this circle there will be something doing every minute, as the committee in charge has arranged an entertaining program, consisting of a concert and selections by the Boston Typos orchestra.

McLoughlin and Williams Will Defend Davis Cup

NEW YORK, July 21.—In lawn tennis circles today the news was accepted that Maurice E. McLoughlin and Richard Norris Williams would be selected to defend the Davis Cup in the singles, and that McLoughlin and Bundy would have to uphold Uncle Sam in the doubles.

Some of the experts thought Karl Behr ought to have a place on the team, but those keener on international tennis could not see Behr for a moment. In the recent double tournament at Seabright, N. J., McLoughlin and Bundy routed Pell and Behr, so the students of the game failed to see where a defeated man like Behr came in for consideration.

Those who are sharp on the international tennis form have it that it matters little about the doubles, for in that department America is doomed to lose.

Maxwell "25"

The Car that is Making New Automobile History

THE Maxwell "25" is today the automobile sensation of the United States and all Europe.

To the automobile world the Maxwell "25" was an unlooked for achievement—an epoch-making triumph.

The Maxwell "25" is a hundred times more than merely a car at $750—it is a superbly finished, big, roomy, graceful, powerful five-passenger automobile.

The Maxwell "25" has every essential quality, and every necessary feature found in the very highest-priced cars.

It is an automobile that stirs your enthusiasm, an automobile that anyone is distinctly proud to own.

The Maxwell "25" looks and acts like a high-priced car, because it is a high-priced car—sold at a popular price.

The Mazurka and How to Dance It

By MAE MURRAY

"The Squat."

The Folk Dance Position.

IN the Mazurka, as in the Tatse or any other Russian Folk Dance, the atmosphere is wild and barbaric.

The steps are entirely secondary to the outside accoutrements, for local color is the thing that counts in any dance of this kind.

In the first position the partners hold one hand behind the head and the other at the waist. This is the ordinary folk dance position. If the girl holds her right hand behind her head, is illustrated, the man holds his left hand high and vice versa. The step begins with what is known as the traveling movement. This movement is really the rocking movement described in the Tatso, only there it was danced in a stationary position, while in this dance the partners move around the room. While moving snap the fingers constantly to give the barbaric atmosphere to the dance, and reverse the movement in the opposite direction afterward.

After the traveling movement comes the skipping movement. The man holds the girl on one side, and they proceed in a double skip around the room, separating and ending the movement in a twirl like the Tatso twirl, a very rapid pirouette. This skipping movement is effective if separated into three distinct parts. That is, skip down the length of the room and then twirl and then resume the skipping movement and twirl again, and so forth, having three movements of skipping separated by twirls.

After this movement the couple dance around the room with the skipping movement, clicking the heels each time to give emphasis to the beat, twirl twice at the end of this movement and end with a sudden squt, which is illustrated in picture two. This position is very difficult to hold, and the balance can only be maintained for a second, so the entire position is over in an instant. After this the whole movement can be repeated back to back or thedance can be ended with the first picture.

The Mazurka is essentially Russian and for that reason will be very popular, and we will be one of the most sought after dances, hence the reason I chose it to describe in an article.

Remember, when dancing in warm weather, not to wear any more clothes than essential. It is hardly necessary to remind a girl of this fact in these days of free and easiness. And of course a light color makes all the difference in the world where heat is concerned. Neither does it absorb so much as the darker materials nor does it retain what it has absorbed. Remember, too, that cold drinks are the worst things in the world for one who would keep cool; warm drinks are better for they bring no reaction in their wake.

Summertime Fables

By DOROTHY DIX

ONCE upon a Time there was A Captain of Industry who by dint of doing others before they got a chance to do Him amassed a Large Bank Roll. Unfortunately Grand Larceny, even when conducted on the most approved basis of High Finance, is a somewhat slow process, and by the time a man gets Millions he has also got the Gout and a Bay window.

Such, alas, was the case with this particular Captain of Industry.

"It is True," said the Innocent Young Maidens addressing their own Souls, "that he does Not Resemble the Hero of Our Romantic Dreams, but we have observed that Romance is a Slim Diet on which to subsist, and that it is not Nearly so Nourishing as Lobster Newburg.

"We also perceive that he is a trifle Stout, but it has not escaped us that a little figure generally goes with a thin pocket book, and we apprehend that it is better to tie up with a fat Bank Account than it is with a Slim Figure. Happily for us, Heaven is Kind, and a Wife sees so Little of her Husband after she is married to Him that it does not matter how he Looks."

Thereupon all the Guileless Maidens set their Cups for the Aged Millionaire.

One Artless Young Student up on Rheumatism and Arterio Sclerosis and Diseases of the Digestive Organs and Liver, and when she could decently do Old Party aside she would discourse to him sweetly upon his Afflictions and tell him how she was a Born Nurse and doted on Ministering to the Sick. These tactics, however, made no hit with the Millionaire.

The Maidens were in despair, apprehending that his Millions must go to Philanthropy instead of to a Beautiful Young Widow, until one, more astute than the rest, took counsel with herself.

"I perceive," she said, "that the Older and Fatter people are the more Eager they are to Dance, and that the Clicking Sound that you hear at the Tango Teas is not the Castanets, but the Creaking of the Bones of the Aged; therefore I will offer to Teach this moneyed Methuselah the Maxixe, and perchance I shall land myself in a Limousine."

With these words she approached the Elderly One, and lured him into the Dance, and as every time his Knees gave way under him she murmured, "How Beautifully you do the Hesitation," he was so enchanted that he Proposed on the spot and She Rolled in Money ever after.

Moral: This Fable teaches that Brains are how Located in your Heels instead of in your Head.

The Mysteries of Space

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

CELESTIAL DUST, THE EARTH'S ENCOUNTER WITH SHOALS OF PARTICLES WHICH ARE ALMOST INCESSANTLY FALLING

ONE of the mysteries of space is the vast quantity of dust that it contains. This dust is sifting down upon the earth out of the open sky continually.

"Star dust" it is sometimes called, because at least a portion of it may really come from the stars. A very large part consists of the smoke of burned-up meteors, which have been consumed in the atmosphere; but these meteors themselves may, in many cases, originally have been shot out of the stars. Others, and perhaps the larger number, have come from the sun, which is only a near-by star.

Comets undoubtedly contribute their quota to the silent storm of dust that is incessantly drifting over the earth superheated by their approach to the sun, and disrupted by electric tension, they scatter dust and gases for millions of miles along their tracks, and a portion of these substances is drawn in by the attraction of the earth.

But one of the most wonderful sources of the dust that encounters the earth in its ceaseless journey through space is the cloud of electrified particles that the sun drives off from its outer envelope. Streams of these particles are projected in all directions to distances of tens and hundreds of millions of miles, and not only the earth, but all the other planets that circles round the sun are exposed to their continual bombardment.

Many physicists and astronomers believe that the electricity in the atmosphere is derived from these vast currents of charged dust sent forth from the sun and that the magnificent displays of electric illumination called the aurora borealis and the aurora australis, according as they are seen centring streams from the sun.

As the earth voyages onward it also picks up scattered dust distributed throughout space, and it is possible that at times it passes through a region of space where such dust is especially abundant. Often when a traveller on a dust highway who suddenly finds himself enveloped in the pulverulent wake left by a speeding automobile; only the "scorcher" that stir up the dust of interstellar spaces are never caught and never even seen.

Besides all these sources of dust outside the earth, it is not to be wondered at that our globe should present to the mind's eye, such an appearance as is represented in the picture. The luminous journey through the universe is subject to the incidents of all journeys. It has to submit to the toil and grime of the road, and careful inspection reveals the grime of its progress almost deep to seep, as a keen detective migh tread the wanderings of a captured fugitive in the varying character of the mud and dust clinging to his garments.

On the broad expanses of unpolluted snow about the polar regions explorers have found the dust of space. In places where its presence alone is a sufficient proof of its extra-terrestrial origin. And in the profounded depths of the oceans, minsled with the ooze that covers the floors of these awful abysses, "star dust" is picked up by the sounding instruments let down from ships that undulate on the surface miles above!

But you should not jump to the conclusion that the earth is perceptibly "growing" on account of the influx of dust from without. It does grow a very little in that way, but it has been calculated that it would take a thousand million years to accumulate a layer one inch thick.

He Knew His Nursedy Rhymes

At a certain school they are now engaged in considering the history of England during the Tudor period.

"Now," said the teacher, "who followed Edward VI.?"

"Mary," replied one child, correctly.

"Right," commented the teacher. "Next boy: Who followed Mary?"

"The little lamb," replied the next boy without an instant's hesitation.

Their Married Life

Helen Meets Laura Wilson, Who Has Good News

Copyright, 1914, International News Service.

THE waiting room of the department store was crowded as Helen entered and looked around. Laura had asked her to come there for lunch, but as yet she herself had not put in an appearance. Helen sat down in one of the few remaining chairs and glanced idly at the woman next to her. People always interested Helen. She liked to speculate on their lives from their appearances. She could amuse herself any time in a crowd doing that very thing.

Suddenly Laura Wilson came in and looked eagerly around. Helen walked across the room to meet her, wondering vaguely what had changed Laura so obviously. Over the telephone her voice had sounded triumphant, but Helen was not prepared for such a radical change in dress. "Whatever have you done to yourself?" she said as they walked to a table by the window. "I am eaten up with curiosity concerning the news you have to tell me, too, so please begin right away."

Laura was dressed very simply in plain white linen with a soft sheer collar and dainty turned back cuffs.

SHE LOOKS AT HELEN

Laura drew off her gloves before speaking. Then she leaned across the table and looked at Helen steadily.

"The most wonderful thing in the world has happened to me, Helen," she said, and not at once either. I have been on the point of calling you up before, but each time I decided to wait until you'd really notice a difference."

"Of course, I notice a difference. I told you long ago how pretty you'd be if you didn't pull your hair right straight back and if you would wear clothes that were really becoming. That dress is a dear, and the hat is so becoming, but, Laura, please get to the point. I am so interested!"

"We'd better decide what we want to eat first," said Laura composedly, and again Helen was surprised. Before, when she had gone anywhere with Laura, Helen had always taken the initiative in everything, and now Laura was going ahead in a way entirely foreign to her. Decidedly things had changed.

"I'm not very hungry. I think I'll have a salad and some iced coffee—chicken salad, I guess is as good as any."

Laura gave the order to the waiter, who departed, and then she turned to Helen again with a smile.

"Well, in the first place, Helen, I have had a raise!" she announced, waited for Helen to exclaim over this piece of luck before she continued. Helen exclaimed delightedly over the information.

"Why, Laura, I think that's simply splendid. How do tell me about it, and is it very much?"

"Not so very much. I am getting twenty-two dollars now, but six dollars makes a big difference, you know, and many ways I can do without. Do you remember the day I had some trouble up my mind to leave and I let Mr Richards talk me over? I was pretty miserable that day. I don't think I'll forget it in a hurry."

USED TO BE A GRUMBLER

Helen did remember it very well. It had been a very trying afternoon for her, and then Warren had taken them both to the theatre that evening.

"I remember that you were very unhappy, dear. I was so sorry for you."

"I used to be a perpetual grumbler, Helen, and you were always so sweet to me, when I know there were plenty of times that I didn't deserve your pity?"

"Nonsense, Laura! You know very well that I had everything in the world to make me happy and you had no one to care!"

Laura smiled across the table and then went on hurriedly:

"Mr. Richards called me over to the desk one day about a month ago and told me that I had been very faithful and that they had decided to give me a raise in salary. He asked me if I would be entirely satisfied if they made my salary the same as the one I had been offered some time ago. Of course, I said yes; I was only too glad to have any kind of a raise, and then he said:

"Well, Miss Wilson, I'll make it $2 more because you didn't desert us that time.'

"Of course I was delighted, and I thanked him rather rapturously for me. I think it rather surprised him. Anyway, he looked at me curiously, and as he turned back to his work he asked why I didn't smile that way more frequently. It wasn't much, but it gave me something to think about on the rest of the day."

"There isn't so very much left to tell. I decided then and there that we get out of life what we put into it, and I have been trying to live with that motto before my eyes ever since. I bought a couple of simple dresses and began to fix my hair becomingly, and then I actually began to practice smiling before my mirror every night."

"And now you don't have to practice any more, I can see that," put in Helen eagerly; "you have the dearest smile, Laura, I have always noticed that; it seems to come from your eyes and it reaches your eyes last."

"Yes, I smile now wherever I have anything to smile at or not, and it really helps a lot in making me feel bright and happy. I really must show off for you, Helen, so here I am. This salad is very good, don't you think so?"

Helen had been looking at Laura intently.

"Isn't there anything more?" she said suddenly.

Laura, taken unawares, flushed scarlet.

"Isn't that enough?" she stammered, and then, gaining her selfpossession quickly, "I almost forgot you'd be tired to death listening to me raven!"

"You might as well tell me the rest, Laura," ignoring the remark, "that blush was enough to give me the secret. Don't you want to tell me?"

Laura was silent, then she looked up and smiled that peculiarly attractive smile of hers.

"Mr. Richards has been nice to me ever since," she said softly, meeting Helen's direct glance with slightly heightened color and a happy light in her eyes that Helen had never imagined could be there. "And last night he asked me to be his wife," she added very softly.

"Oh, Laura," breathed Helen, "you don't know how happy I am for you! Why, I just can't tell you how I feel, I—"

"Don't you really believe I know, Helen? I couldn't have told you if I hadn't believed you would feel as you do. But I don't think any one, even you, can know how happy I feel; they're playing that Sari waltz, isn't it lovely?"

Helen was silent as they listened to the music. She knew that Laura did understand her feelings on the subject, and even if she had wanted to, it would have been impossible for her to say another word just then.

A LITTLE GIRL OF ELEVEN

"You know Mr. Richards has married before," Laura went on, after a few minutes, when the music had stopped and she and Helen had both regained their composure. "His wife has been dead for about fifteen years. He has a little daughter several years old, Helen. It seems so wonderful to have some one who really cares. Sometimes I wake up in the night with the idea that it can't be true. And now I must rush back, or I'll be late."

(Another incident in this story of human interest will appear on this page soon.)

In the Web of Life

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Tom Morton, college man, tall and plain, enjoying a comfortable inheritance and a prospering business has won the hand and heart of Edith Hale, after her return from a "finishing" course in Europe. To save his dashing, heedless young cousin, Ralph, from a financial predicament, Tom consents to cancel an evening's engagement with his fiancee and run over to Baltimore to settle the embarrassing debt.

Ralph, always popular with women, and a long friend and confidant of Edith's, offers to call at the handsome Hale house in Homewood to cheer her in her disappointment at missing a talk with Tom. The latter's telephoned explanation for his proposed absence (he does not reveal the cause of it) leaves his fiancee vexed that business can be more important than a talk over plans for their own engagement dinner—planned for the following night.

Constance Medford, a tactful, a onable young cousin, who lives with the Hales, champions Tom as Edith pouts. "Perhaps Ralph will come over. If so, I shall not rule s Tom, for Ralph is such fun." And Ralph does call, fails to dismiss Edith's foolish suspicions as to Tom's absence, but enjoys Ralph's call.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER V.

RALPH MORTON lingered long at the Hales' that evening. He and Edith soon wearied of dancing and allowed Constance to cross the hall into the library, which was her favorite resort and where her uncle and aunt were seated, one on either side of the large central table, reading by the soft light from the lamp standing there.

The pair made a pretty picture, the girl observed as she entered the room. What a beautiful thing married life was when a couple grew old gracefully together, and when their tastes were similar and their mutual love strong. Yet what a wretched thing marriage would be if two people were not congenial!

As she thus pondered there flashed into her mind the thought of Tom Morton and his strong character and of Edith and her excitable, affectionate, yet intolerant nature. Would this couple ever be the happy Darby and Joan that Edith's parents were? Marriage was a serious thing—so much more serious than young people appreciated!

She seated herself with a little sigh in a chair near the reading lamp and her aunt glanced at her with an affectionate smile.

"So you are leaving the young people and coming in here with us old folks, are you?" she asked.

"Yes." Constance smiled back, "they are having a strenuous discussion on the last new dance, and, you know, while I dance sometimes, I do not care much about it, so I thought that there might be room for me here."

Her uncle leaned over to pat her shoulder reassuringly. "You ought to know that there's always room for you where your aunt and I are, dear child," he said.

"Thank you, sir," replied the girl gratefully. How good these dear people were to her and how much she loved them! Tears of gratitude came to her eyes, and that she might not show them she took up a book that she had this afternoon left on the table and began to read it. So absorbed did she become in the story that she soon forgot her surroundings and the young people across the hall. She was brought back to herself with a start by her uncle's voice.

"I declare," he said softly, laying down the volume he had been reading for an hour, "Ralph is staying very late this evening."

"Yes," agreed the wife, looking up from her magazine. "I wish he would go home and let Edith get to bed. She looks tired. "Moreover," stifling a yawn, "I'm a little sleepy myself."

"Go to bed, then," suggested Constance, "and I will stay down here reading until Ralph goes. I am interested in my book anyway."

HAD FORGOTTEN HER.

Thus urged, the two elderly people went to their rooms, stepping lightly that the caller in the drawing-room might not suspect that they felt he was outstaying their patience. For an hour longer Constance sat reading. Then she heard Edith's voice and there was a weary sound in it.

"I think, Ralph," she was saying, "that I ought to send you home. I am sure that father and mother have gone upstairs—and I ought to go, too."

It was not until Ralph replied that Constance appreciated that he had forgotten her proximity or that he did not suspect any one was within earshot.

"I know, dear," he said, "but there are so few occasions now when I can have a nice long talk with you alone, such as we have had tonight. And the times are getting fewer."

Edith tried to laugh. "Oh, well," she said, "I hope we will always be good friends. I don't see why we shouldn't."

Yet there was a wistful note in the voice that made Constance sorry for the speaker. Was she still regretting Tom's absence, or was there some other trouble on her heart? Aridly, Constance started toward the door, but as she reached the hall, she stopped suddenly. A sentence was borne to her, a sentence spoken by Ralph Morton, in a low, agitated voice.

"When I think," he said, "of what Tom has won and I have lost, I feel as if I could not bear it."

Constance's heart gave a glad throb as she heard the girl's reply, although it was uttered in an unsteady tone.

"You have no right to talk to me like that, Ralph," Edith began. Then, as she faltered, and her voice broke, the unwilling listener in the hall rendered further reply unnecessary by hurrying forward and making her presence known.

"I have just finished my book," she announced easily, "so I thought I would come in here and see how you young people were faring."

"TIRED TO DEATH"

Edith turned to her eagerly, stretching out her hands as if to draw her cousin to her.

"Oh, Connie," she said, "I'm so glad you came just in time to keep Ralph and me from quarreling! We've been boring each other to death."

"And I must go home," declared the man, no sign of embarrassment on his face. But Constance saw that he held Edith's hand longer than usual, and she noted, also, the quiver of the girl's lip as she murmured "good night!"

The front door had closed behind him and the two cousins were on their way upstairs before Edith spoke again.

"I'm tired to death," she said tremulously, "tired of almost everything and everybody except you, Connie. I would like to go away where I need not see anybody for a while—except just you."

Constance knew her to her and kissed her. "You're just weary today, that's all, dear," she murmured. "And you are disappointed about Tom's not coming. Try to think of how good he is, and of how he loves you."

To her surprise, Edith burst into tears. "Oh, Connie, Connie!" she murmured, "I sometimes think that it's a mistake to love any man!"

"Oh, no, it is not, dear," Constance said gently, but firmly. "It's not a mistake for you to love Tom."

But Tom's fiancee made no reply.

To Be Continued.

Gave Him the Horrors

When old Farmer Giles went to the menagerie he was prepared for shocks, and he got them.

For the first time in his life he saw an elephant, and when he saw how big it was and how long its spine with horror. For the first time, too, he beheld an elephant, and was amazed to know which end was which. But the limit was reached when he came to the cage of opposite a cage that contained a dromedary. Giles looked at it with bulging eyes, and remained standing long after the other people had departed.

He was fascinated in an unpleasant sort of way, by the queer shape of the beast's legs, which looked more like bundles of badly rolled up hearth rugs than anything else; by the quaintly drooping underlip, by the rolling eyes, and, above all, by the weird hump on its back.

The night came on, but still old Giles stood before the cage, hypnotized into silence. But at last he mopped his brow and addressed the starry heavens.

"Hush my buttons! But I don't believe there ain't no sich an animal!"

Life and Death

A minister who guarded his morning study hour very carefully told the new maid that in no circumstances were callers to be admitted—except, of course, he added, in case of life and death.

Half an hour later the maid knocked at the door.

"A gentleman to see you, sir."

"Why, I thought I told you"—

"I told him, sir," she replied; "but he says it's a question of life and death."

So he went downstairs—and found an insurance agent.

Embarrassing Hairs Can Be Quickly Removed

(Beauty Culture)

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method. Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths, one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.

Alice Ariette Dorgere, light comedy actress of the Vaudeville Theatre, Paris, says: "Savon Cadum is wonderful. I find each new box better than the last."

It is natural to envy a woman with a clear, clean, healthy complexion. In the first place, every woman should be careful what kind of soap she uses. Savon Cadum, the great French Complexion Soap, with the remarkable healing properties of Cadum Pomade, the famous skin remedy, makes it easy for every woman to have a good complexion. It preserves the skin in a condition of health and encourages a clear complexion. At the leading drug and dept. stores, 50c. a cake.

FORCE FIGHT TO RECOVER NEW HAVEN LOOT

Still more trouble is threatened of the New Haven road in a movement begun in New York among minority stockholders for restitution of the millions which the Interstate Commerce Commission says was lost through the acts of the William Rockefeller, Morgan, Mellen and other directors of the road.

Robinson & Lauber, attorneys of No. 115 Broadway, New York, are rounding up stockholders to begin a fight for restitution of the lost millions.

Mr. Lauber of the law firm, stated that the purpose of getting minority stockholders together was to try and effect restitution by directors and estates of deceased members of the board of moneys which he claimed had been unlawfully diverted from proper channels.

"A general accounting," said Lauber, "is what we shall try for, and with figures then before us we shall ask for a receiver for the moneys involved. We do not contemplate putting the corporation into receivership."

"Are you working in co-operation with Sherman L. Whipple, who stated for $300,000,000 in behalf of New Haven stockholders at Boston last week?" was asked.

"Not at all, for he is trying to secure in a roundabout way what we ask for directly," replied Lauber. The Lauber complaint will be amended shortly, but it is understood no specific damages will be named as being due to stockholders."

FINAL WORD TODAY BY M'REYNOLDS IN NEW HAVEN SUIT

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The final answer of the Department of Justice on the New York, New Haven & Hartford case will be made late today. Attorney-General McReynolds announced at the conclusion of the cabinet meeting. The railroad, it was asserted, will be compelled to stand suit under the Sherman act in the Federal Court for separation from its subsidiary rail, trolley and steamship lines and it was exigated that criminal prosecution of the officers and directors of the road will follow. President Wilson, it was said, is strongly supporting his Attorney-General in this stand.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong this afternoon, having recovered from the recessional most of the morning. There was an improvement immediately after the announcement at Washington that the Eastern rate case decision would not come today. A dispatch says:

While there was nothing official at the Interstate Commerce Commission today to indicate when decisions will be forthcoming, it was the general impression that it will be made public tomorrow or next day. Officials of the commission were busy on all individual cases, and among the dockets were totally without figures.

In New York early afternoon gains included Chesapeake & Ohio ¾, Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1⅜, southern Pacific 1⅞, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading 1, Lehigh Valley 1⅜, Amalgamated ¾, Northern Pacific ¾, Union Pacific 1¼, St. Paul 1⅛, New York Central 1¼ and Mexican Petroleum 1⅜. New Haven was unchanged and Baltimore & Ohio was off ⅝.

In Boston New Haven was up ⅛ and Boston & Maine 1¾, while Elevated had advanced a point and United Fruit was unchanged. Greene-Cananea was o ffa point.

EARLY TREND DOWNWARD.

When markets opened prices were irregular, but most important issues showed losses and the early trend was downward. One bear influence was recent heavy selling by foreigners of American securities. This is credited to loss of confidence in the methods, or morals, of eminent financiers in this country. While a good deal of London selling was prompted by New York orders, the object being to facilitate bear raiding on this side, there is a disposition on the part of European investors to get rid of holdings in railroads which seemed likely to pass into the hands of receivers or to be made the objects of governmental investigations or suits. With Europe taking gold from this country, increasing its sales of manufactured products here and liquidating its American investments, both values and trade in the United States are likely to suffer. It may take years to recover the confidence of foreigners.

AMERICANS WEAK ABROAD.

Americans were weak in London before New York opened, issues to show the greatest losses including St. Paul and Baltimore & Ohio. This helped depress sentiment at the start and within a few minutes the New York list worked lower. In Boston trading was dull and narrow. It was reported from London that a less cheerful view was taken of the probable outcome of conferences on the Ulster situation. While a war cloud in the Balkans had an adverse effect upon the British and continental markets. But the New York market was active during the first hour, transactions there totalling around 167,000 shares. During the first hour there was a buying movement and the increased demand sent stocks up. It grew in volume later in the forenoon and by noon the list was showing gains instead of losses.

WAITED FOR RATE VERDICT.

Traders continued cautious and disposed to wait for the decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the eastern rate case. In some quarters it had been predicted that it would be rendered today. The announcement from Washington received before markets opened was that the decision would not be rendered this morning. This was construed to imply it might come later in the day. Few believed it would be announced during market hours.

Baltimore & Ohio sold to a new low price record because of a renewal of talk that its dividend rate might be reduced. The weakness of New Haven was due to reports from Washington that the conferences between representatives of the road's directorate and Attorney-General McReynolds had been unsatisfactory in result. The New Haven executive committee will consider the situation at a meeting to be held this afternoon. Westinghouse, which sold at 78½, the highest price in five years, did not hold all its gain.

MARKET GREW STRONGER.

The market tone improved around midday and strong issues at that time included Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Lehigh Valley, Steel, Union Pacific, Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred.

Leading coppers were firm, although the asking price for electrolytic had been reduced in New York by producers from 13¾ to 13⅝ cents a pound.

Trade reports from the West and southwest indicate that business is improving in those sections, showing that the prospect of enormous crops is being felt. Among the industrials to show gains was Central Leather. It reports for the June quarter an increase of $168,493 in net earnings and an increase of $300,770 in surplus for the first six months of 1914.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Some of the largest copper agencies abroad reduced their asking price for electrolytic to 13¾ cents a pound yesterday, and this is said to have resulted in fairly active buying by Europeans.

The price for wire products has been advanced $1 a ton. The new asked for wire since January 1, 1910, has been $1.50 per 100 pounds, which is $2 per ton above current quotations. The low since that date was $1.50 per 100 pounds.

London copper warrants were off 6s. 3d. by noon today.

Uncle Sam's Railroad Potato Patch---Doing Badly

The Chewed Up Potato Field, and the Fat, Swollen Potato Bugs

The Potato Field Is the Railroad, the Potato Bugs Are the Money Lenders. Government Ownership Would Help That Potato Field

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

When you go through the country you see some poor, half-starved, brown, withered, badly bitten potato plants waving in the breeze. You know the unhealthy condition of those plants indicates an unhealthy condition underground.

When you come closer and look at the plants you see the happy, prosperous, uninterrupted potato bug family.

There is the big mother potato bug, with her shell hardened, divided in nice yellow stripes. There is also papa potato bug, very fat, very strong, moving about at will, full of self-approval.

And there are all the little potato bugs, from tiny, dark-red creatures as big as the head of a pin, to fat, soft, swollen, reddish, hideous, blood-like things, almost as big as the father or mother, but without the hard shell.

The farmer who does not understand his business looks at the potato field in despair, scratches his head and says, "I will not get many potatoes out of THAT field."

AND THE POTATO BUGS GO ON EATING.

If the farmer knew enough to get the right kind of paris green, properly diluted, or some other good bug poison and disinfectant, and spray it on those potato bugs, they would roll over, fall on the ground, turn their legs up in the air and die. And the potatoes underground would have a chance.

What the potato bugs are to the potato field, the money-lenders, the so-called "eminently respectable bankers," are to the railroads of the United States.

And GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP is the dose of paris green that will soon attend to those railroad potato bugs, giving the railroads, the shippers, the workers and the country a chance.

You know how the banker potato bug money-lender goes to work on a railroad. We shall tell you, and the description comes from a man very much on the inside, who has seen the thing happen over and over.

Remember, as a parenthesis, that it is not the working railroad men that wreck the railroads and cheat the country.

The wrecking is done by big financiers of the New Haven-Hartford-Morgan-Wall Street kind, who control the road, and compel their employes, the railroad president, and managers, to act dishonestly.

After the big schemers have been at work for a while and gutted the property, the bankers come in and finish the job—and this is how it is done.

A RAILROAD NEEDS MONEY.

The management by all kinds of dishonesty has used up all the ready capital.

The Pullman company has had its share, by getting a monopoly of the sleeping cars and charging three times what it is worth.

The express companies have got their share, by paying a great deal less than they ought to pay—and giving express stock to those that control the railroad.

The contractors have got their share, selling supplies to the railroad at RETAIL prices or more than retail prices instead of wholesale. ASK THE HONORABLE DIAMOND JIM BRADY HOW THAT IS DONE. HE CAN GIVE YOU SOME INFORMATION, AND WILL, UNDOUBTEDLY, AS A PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZEN.

Coal is bought for the railroad from the man who owns the coal mine and CONTROLS THE RAILROAD and the road pays more than the coal ought to cost, and the road is hitched up to a coal mine and worked for the profit of the coal mine, not for the profit of the road.

Or, as in the good old days of the New York Central, the Vanderbilts own the Grand Central station and charge so much for every car that runs in, robbing the stockholders in that way.

Or the Vanderbilts own a check-bridge across a creek, refuse to sell that to the railroad, and charge so much for every passenger that goes over the creek.

Or they own a "white freight line," also a good robber of stockholders.

At last, the railroad has exhausted its own resources and must go to the potato bug of finance, and THAT is the potato bug's happy day.

Big Mr. Potato Bug, sitting in his nice office, very dignified, clean and neat, includes among his partners a "wise bug" who knows all about values.

The head potato bug goes into the office of the wise bug and says, "This railroad wants to borrow forty millions. They offer this security. Look it over carefully. Let me know if it is worth at least TWICE AS MUCH as they want to borrow."

The head potato bug goes away, the wise bug studies, looks into mortgages, looks into the various competing lines, the guaranteed dividends, whether any meddling public official might possibly protect the stockholder against extortion, discovers that there is not the SLIGHTEST danger of that, and says to the head potato bug, "Yes, the stuff they offer you is worth at least twice the amount they want to borrow."

The wise bug has done his duty, the head of the potato bug firm does the rest.

He calls in the men who want to borrow the money and looks solemn. He talks about 1907 hard times, and the sadness of life generally. He says that money is very scarce. So far as he is concerned, of course, he hasn't got any.

It is very hard to sell anything, very hard especially to sell the bonds of a railroad which, as is well known, has practically exhausted its resources.

"But," he says, "gentlemen, I shall TRY. I shall try very hard to sell these bonds for you. Of course, you will let me have them at eighty or better. I do not say that I CAN sell them, but I shall try."

The men managing the railroad, trying to borrow money to keep it going, to make up for their own robbery, perhaps, or the robbery of those above them, know that they have GOT TO GET THE MONEY and they must pay the potato bug's price.

They DO pay the potato bug's price.

He gets the bonds of the road for eighty cents on the dollar. He sells them to his customers, perhaps for par, perhaps for more than par, perhaps for ninety-eight.

Out of an issue of forty millions, he put into his own pocket anywhere from eight to ten millions of dollars net profit—and all for what?

For a little study by the wise potato bug and a little solemn talk by the head of the potato bug firm.

How do you suppose railroads can live under this kind of private ownership management?

How can the most utter fool oppose government ownership when he sees how the roads are gutted, how impossible it is for them to keep up their equipment, decent service, or live on fair charges?

If you increased freight rates five per cent., then another five, and then fifty—you would not satisfy the thieves that rob through contracts, the other thieves that rob through stock jobbing, and the batch of potato bugs of Wall Street that get the last bite.

There are those ignorant enough to ask, "What could government ownership do for railroads?"

Government ownership could do for the railroads exactly what a wise farmer with his paris green could do for an afflicted field of potatoes.

The government, you will observe, does not borrow money to run the parcel post, paying some banking firm a commission of twenty per cent. besides the interest.

The government does not permit a little group of thieves on the corner of Wall Street and Broad to get half a dozen branches of the postal service, or the parcel post service, or the navy, or the army in its clutches and rob everybody concerned.

The government, issuing bonds, gets a thousand dollars for a thousand-dollar bond—not eight hundred dollars, giving the balance to a potato bug.

The government borrows money at three per cent. and less—not at the rate of six per cent. with twenty per cent. off, which makes TWENTY-SIX PER CENT. PROFIT FOR THE FIRST YEAR.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP IS COMING:

First, because it is natural and inevitable that the people themselves should own the monopolies that they create.

Second, because THE THIEVES IN CHARGE OF THE RAILROADS, THE FINANCIAL POTATO BUGS THAT DEVOUR THEM, THE MANAGERS THAT EXPLOIT THEM HAVE MADE IT UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE RAILROADS TO CONTINUE EVEN SHOULD THE GOVERNMENT NOT INTERFERE, AS IT INEVITABLY WILL DO.

By James J. Montague

The Tellers

HE'S always glad to see you; it seems well worth the while,
To hear his softly cordial voice and watch his genial smile.
He calls you promptly by your name, which deftly flatters you,
And how it does delight you when he calls you "Mister," too.
You feel that for his tactfulness you never quite can thank
The man who takes your money at the bank.

BUT at the other window is a fellow with a grouch,
Who can't fulfil his duties without seeming to say, "Ouch!"
He looks at you suspiciously, as one with the belief
That you must be a forger, a "con-man" or a thief.
He always is a misanthrope, a doubter and a crank;
The man who pays out money at the bank.

Fellow Sufferer

The New Haven stockholders are not the only victims of bad judgment. Over in Ulster a moving picture man bought the rights to photograph the war.

Easy Enough

All those college professors who want more pay need to do is to add the tango to their curriculum and they will soon be going to and from their classrooms in their own automobiles.

Just the Place

Perhaps when Mr. McAdoo returns from his honeymoon he will have the Treasury Building fitted up for his residence. It is large and roomy, and right across the street from the residence of his father-in-law.

More Trouble for the A-B-C

Now that Huerta has quit, it will, of course, be necessary to call a special session of the Mediation Court to determine whether Villa or Carranza shall have the looting privileges in Mexico City.

He Never Jeopardizes His Job

We do not share the general surprise occasioned by Mr. Bryan's failure to make a row because he was denied a substitute. No doubt he thought it over and decided it would do to let the President find out how well his work could really be done.

Showing the Need of a Pure Legislation Law

No wonder the President is suffering from stomach trouble. He has been trying to digest all the legislation he has recommended to Congress.

New Developments Every Day

The Grand Jury that is considering Mrs. Carman's case ought to take no action till the kitchen maid has time to think of three or four new and original versions of what happened on the night of the tragedy.

Call a Consultation

The prospect of a suit against the New Haven directors indicates that William Rockefeller's doctors will have a fairly prosperous season.

Why He Bounced 'Em

Being naturally opposed to a leisure class in Mexico, Mr. Villa gave the I. W. W.s very short shrift.

As Good as a Gold Mine

It is penny wise and pound foolish to deny the Congressmen their twenty-cent mileage. As soon as they get it they're sure to adjourn in order to use it.

There Is Something in This Idea

"No votes, no rents," say the London suffs. If this applies to the rents in priceless paintings it might be a good scheme to continue to withhold the vote.

They Need All the Arguments They Can Get

Democratic orators are pointing with pride to the recent raise in Kansas as another argument that the Administration is giving the country what is good for it.

The Behavior of Children—There Is a Vast Difference Between Liberty and License—A Fact Which More American Mothers Should Consider.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

AMERICA is old enough now, to know that the word liberty does not mean license; that freedom does not mean lawlessness. American mothers have a large duty confronting them; the duty of teaching their children the fine distinctions which lie between these words.

Ask any man of woman who has see many lands and many people, and you will be told that American children are most lawless and illbred of all the children on earth.

On any ship, or in any hotel, the children who make themselves obnoxious by their loud voices, their impertinent manners and their failure to show courtesy to their elders, are invariably American children. It is not an unusual sight to see American children walk or stand before strangers, staring at them rudely, and whispering or tittering as they move away.

Two young girls made themselves so obnoxious on one of the large ocean liners, by their impertinent manners to passengers in the dining saloon, that it became necessary to ask the chief steward to reprove them. These children were daughters of a New York banker. Their mother was on board with a retinue of attendants, but she had never taken time to teach her children refinement or even common decency of deportment.

When such examples of ill-breeding can be found among the rich, one cannot wonder that the poorer classes have not reached a standard where they understand the importance of including good manners in the curriculum of education.

A lady who employs boys of all work at her country home, was surprised to discover that children of Americans who came to her for work were nearly always lacking in the little polite habits which it would seem every mother would teach her boys and girls as soon as they were able to talk.

For instance, boys of sixteen came into her presence without removing their caps; and often when reporting to her for directions, they bolted into her private apartments without knocking or in any way making their presence known.

It became necessary for her to teach her employes good manners before she taught them their other duties.

Every mother should train her children to show good taste and delicacy in their treatment of herself. Then it would follow as a matter of course, that they would treat others with courtesy. From the time a boy is able to walk, he should be taught to rap before entering a room, and girls should be taught the same act of courtesy.

There is too much freedom in most American homes. It does not indicate affection, or mutual understanding, or good comradeship, when people bolt into the presence of another member of the family with no word or sound to prepare the way. It merely indicates lack of thoughtful consideration.

The refinements of life do much to keep the affections alive.

A delicate code of manners, observed between husband and wife, helps to keep them out of the divorce court.

A gentle tap on a door, even if the door is open and a word indicating who is coming, makes the advent of a loved one no less welcome.

The mother who does not train her son to show to her the little courtesies like this is sowing seeds of annoyance for others who will be irritated by this lack of thoughtfulness.

No matter what position a man occupies in the world, whether he employs or is employed, whether he is waited upon, or waits upon others, good manners and courtesy and politeness will be of incalculable value to him.

A lady had occasion to call at the office of a prominent lawyer in a city of colleges.

The lawyer was absent, but his secretary was present, a well educated young man, of good American family. The lady who called was one for whom he unquestionably felt respect, yet he permitted her to stand for five minutes in his presence while she told her errand; and he lounged comfortably in his chair, with a cap on his head which he never thought to remove.

He seemed most anxious to be of service and in every way tried to help her, no doubt he would be greatly astonished and deeply pained if he knew she thought him discourteous. Such conduct is not at all uncommon in America; it is to be met with every day; and it is always the fault of the mother.

The father, too, comes in for his share of blame; but it is the mother who has the child near her hour in and hour out, during those early years when habits are formed; and it is to the mother a child should look for right training in deportment.

Little girls, as well as boys, need careful coaching. They should never be allowed to enter rooms without previous announcement; they should not be permitted to break into conversation without apology; and they should not lounge or sit while their elders stand.

Teach your children these little refinements, good mothers.

It is better than leaving them a legacy of hard-earned money.

Secret of Winning Popularity

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

MANY persons in speaking of popularity and the way to be popular, seem to begin at the wrong end of the subject. Their suggestions point to the acquiring of good manners and pleasing ways for the mere sake of the personal gratification of being admired, of gaining something for self.

The idea is seldom advanced or impressed that the true ethical reasons, the best motives for an aim toward being agreeable and thus winning popularity are to be found in the desire to use one's gifts, talents, good manners or accomplishments as aids toward making the world a pleasanter place for those we meet in it.

Those who aim for selfish popularity do not deceive anyone. For a short time, perhaps, they may have their own way, or receive a large number of invitations, but very soon their vanity and egotism become apparent and they cease to be chosen as friends.

Insincerity and superficiality are easily recognized. A mere polish, an outward veneer in manner may be obtained by observing conventional rules, but the essence of good manners is in a kindly heart.

Unless there is an absence of self-centredness there is no foundation on which to build popularity. The moment that a person is greedy for rewards, that moment there is failure.

If we observe the truly popular persons among our friends we discern the secret of their charm. They are thoughtful in showing little attentions, they listen when anyone is speaking. They are good-natured toward tiresome people, patient with uninteresting people.

They no not treat the beautiful ceremony of greeting in a perfunctory way. They offer the hand with a graceful gesture and give a smile and make some pleasant remark. It may be a commonplace speeach, but they make it in a pleasing way.

The very simple, social graces need not be practiced. A low, soft voice is more winning than a harsh, rasping tone. A few tactful words are more acceptable than a blunt, ingracious speech.

To understand others we must try to throw ourselves into their interests, listen to what they have to say, share with them in their joys as well as their troubles. We must be truly sympathetic, try to imagine how others feel and to be glad with them and not think we are to reserve sympathy only to be sorry for th'r sorrows.

There are countless little things of ordinary courtesy and kindness to be done every day—the little things done on the instant—the greetings, amenities, words of cheer, comfort and encouragement spoken as we meet each other.

It is not by waiting for opportunities to do great deeds or perform conspicuous services that we win favor, affection or popularity. Single acts of simple kindness, done without a thought that they might be helpful, have proved of greater value than the things we have done with care and preparation. The "Little, nameless, unremembered acts are the things which win the most enduring sort of happiness for self, and popularity with others.
